Advertising Pays
Yes, He Drank Beer
This Boresome Universe
What a Size!

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WITH COMMON sense Secretary Davis says to the Countess Cathcart, "Come on in."

Strong minded American women were indignant because Lord Craven was admitted here without question, whereas the Countess Cathcart was shut out. These were the two whose elopement shocked our pure authorities. The double sex standard proved too much for our clean minded, strong minded women.

OBSERVE THE power of advertising, even when it isn't very good advertising. The Countess lands from Ellis Island with a contract to appear on the stage at a high salary. She wouldn't have got that without the assistance of Uncle Sam.

In Washington City on Washington's birthday one thousand men and women gathered to fight prohibition, determined to change the Volstead law. They probably will not succeed with Coolidge in the White House, which means that they will have to postpone operations until after 1932.

THE DRYS MOURN because somebody has proved that George Washington not only drank beer but brewed beer. It can't be denied, because he left in his own handwriting a recipe for brewing beer, excellent in all respects except that he put in too much molasses and allowed insufficient time for aging.

YOU NEED NOT change your opinion of Washington on account of the beer. At least he drank good beer and light wines, taking whiskey rarely. He did what others did in his day, including some things that the pure don't do now. He kept slaves and other things.

IF WASHINGTON needs any excuse, let it be remembered, however painful the memory may be to the bone drys, that the list of history's thousand greatest men that ever lived contains not one teetotaler. In fact, you couldn't name a teetotaler among the ten thousand greatest men in history. Mohammed was only a pretended teetotaler. All the Latin races, all the peoples along the Mediterranean, drank wine and were proud of it. Takes in all the Greeks and Romans, Spaniards, Italians and French. You know about the Germans, British, Scandinavians.

THE FOUNDER of Christianity Himself was not a total abstainer. At a wedding when there was not enough wine, He changed water into wine, that the wedding might not be gloomy. Prohibitionists say He changed the water into grape juice, with less than one-half of one per cent. alcohol. That may be, but the Bible doesn't say so.

PASSING THE terrible fact that he drank beer, and the undemocratic fact that he stood at receptions with his hands behind his back, to avoid shaking hands with his dear fellow Americans, what is the greatest thing in Washington's character?

It was unbreakable, persistent courage, the greatest thing in any character except philosophical or inventive genius.

Washington was great and he won, because he would not be discouraged. Defeated time after time, retreating and retreating, abandoned by many of his brave Americans, Washington went on.

He was made of iron, the majority of men are made of mush.

TO ASK, "ARE you interested in this universe in which your solar system is an atom," seems a strange question, almost like asking a cosmopolitan whether anything interests him except his own little front yard in South Brooklyn.

But among the sixteen hundred million human beings on the earth, more than fifteen hundred millions are decidedly not interested in the universe, and at least fourteen hundred and fifty millions do not know that

NO CA SH, BILLS PAID BY FRIEND

Washington, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.)—Count Salm Von Hoogstraten, who came to the United States ostensibly to visit his estranged wife, Millicent Rogers, and see their infant son, may not stay long on American shores.

He has arrived in Washington as he expresses it, "for a vacation."

Representative F. H. LaGuardia of New York declared today he has under consideration a formal request to the Department of Labor to start deportation proceedings against the Count on the ground that he has "no visible means of support" and is likely to become a public charge.

It was LaGuardia who officially called the attention of the immigration authorities to the fact that the Earl of Craven was in this country while they were holding the Countess of Cathcart in the detention pen at Ellis Island.

Referring to Palm Beach dispatches that Count Salm's bills at Palm Beach were paid by William Anbelt, a New Yorker, Representative LaGuardia said it was questionable whether the Count's position in the country did not bring him within the purview of the immigration law. Under this law, aliens who have "no visible means of support" may be sent back to their native shores.

"Certainly," said LaGuardia, "the Count is not supporting his wife and child."

GOODWIN REBUKED

While the Springfield branch of the State Motor Vehicles Registry is frantically trying to find out the cause of the shortage of $1,700 in its accounts, Registrar Frank A. Goodwin is just as frantically trying to stave off the barrage of indignant flappers, in and out of his office.

The registrar was widely quoted as saying that many of the girls in the employ of the different offices of the State were irresponsible flappers, who paid more attention to their lip-stocks than to their duties.

"The thing has been greatly exaggerated," said Goodwin today. "I did say before a legislative committee the other day that the salary for the girls in my office is so low that the girls are of the calibre who are thinking more about what they are doing to do tonight than their work in the office."

But up in Springfield they are

HAPPINESS AHOY FOR STILLMANS!

First picture of banker James A. Stillman and his wife, snapped aboard ship during their "trial honeymoon" trip to Europe. During the voyage Fifi and "Jimmy" held classes in love, Fifi playing teacher and "Jimmy" the willing pupil.

Dispatches from abroad tell of a complete reconciliation between the long estranged couple. These dispatches are borne out by the picture above. Stillman has just settled a fortune on Jay Leeds, son of the "other woman" in the case.

TRAVELS FAR AFTER BEING KNIFED IN FEUD

Carrying three stab wounds in his back, one of which may result in his death, Joseph Liaccomo made his way in some manner from Watertown to Lynn, 12 miles, police discovered today when they rushed him from his Lynn home to a hospital.

Liaccomo is in a critical condition at the Lynn Hospital, where it is believed one of the stab wounds is deep enough to have punctured a lung.

Meanwhile another man is under arrest in Lynn, a third is in the Waltham Hospital and a fourth is being hunted as the results of a stab-up affray in Watertown, believed to have climaxed an old feud and to have sent Liaccono staggering on a bloody trail back to Lynn.

The man under arrest is Antonio Capiano, of No. 128 Blossom street, Lynn, who is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Peter Procopio of Quirk street, Watertown, is hunted on a similar charge except that the police believe his assault had an intent to kill. A warrant against him has been sworn out.

The man at the Watertown Hospital is Joseph Corapi of No. 195 Summer street, Watertown, who had fifteen stitches taken in a deep gash in his face.

The stabbing occurred in Summer street, Watertown, but because all the men refused to talk, the police are in the dark as to the cause. All that Liaccono says he remembers is that he was stabbed in Watertown and somehow staggered all the way back to his home at No. 103 Blossom street, Lynn.

ACCUSED CHELSEA COP SAYS CONVICT TOLD HIM KIN PLANNED 'REVENGE'

Testimony that Henry K. Friedman, Boston insurance man, threatened to have Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley and his "crowd" cleaned up for sending his son, Percy Friedman, to State Prison, was given in the Chelsea rum conspiracy trial in Federal Court today.

Sergeant Edward W. Isbester of the Chelsea police, one of the 16 defendants on trial with Mayor Quigley, testifying in his own behalf, said the conversation with the elder Friedman took place some time before the present trial.

The witness quoted Henry K. Friedman as saying he was going to Washington to get his friends Katz and Goldman "and that he was going to bring them on to clean up Quigley and his crowd for sending his boy to State's prison."

Katz and Goldman are Department of Justice agents who were active in obtaining evidence in the trial.

Sergeant Isbester also testified that the elder Friedman told him U. S. District Attorney Harold P. Williams would not pros his case if the police sergeant would testify for the government.

Another witness, Patrolman Edward J. Forbes, testified that when he and Patrolman John B. McGee (Continued on Page 6, Column 1.)

Witness Isbester, in taking the stand, admitted that last night, with other Chelsea officers, he entered the home of Mrs. Sophie Isenberg, a Government witness.

Questioned by Attorney Harold P. Williams, Besser said he was sent to the house, but although the officers found a gallon jug of liquor no arrest was made.

He said he visited the house at No. 7 Suffolk street, Chelsea, on complaint and under instructions of Lieutenant Bartley, but that his party had no warrant. The word "raid" was not used in the testimony.

Sergeant Beaser admitted he met a Miss Boudreau at the house, but denied saying to her:

"Can you imagine that Isenberg, the yellow rat, going over and turning State's evidence after all the protection he was given?"

Sergeant Isbester was cross-examined by U. S. District Attorney Williams.

FLO LEEDS' BOY GETS BIG SUM

New York, Feb. 23.—The final chapter of the famous S. ...an case has been written, as far as Florence Leeds, the "other woman" is concerned.

James A. Stillman has made a settlement upon her boy, his son, Jay Ward Leeds. Stillman has established a trust fund, which gives the youngster $20,000 a year until he is 21, and the principal, nearly $150,000, upon his becoming of age.

Mrs. Leeds has announced she will be married in Paris on June 17 to a prominent New York business man.

"From now on I am just a disinterested onlooker," she said. "I only ask to be left in peace and happiness with my boy."

Thus the "other woman," steps out of the story. Her boy, for whom she fought for so many years is acknowledged and provided for by his father, and the James A. Stillmans are reunited in Paris.

Mrs. Leeds arrived in New York last Thursday from Florida, where she had been spending the winter.

Announcement of the settlement was made by William M. Sullivan, who for five years has acted as Stillman's personal attorney. It was made at Sullivan's suggestion in his office in the Bar Building "to silence false rumors concerning Mrs. Leeds."

O'BRIEN PROBES NIGHT CLUB FIGHT, GIRL HURT

A rigid investigation of the Lambs' Club on Lansdowne street was started by District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien today after a "free-for-all" fight at the club in which a girl was badly cut by a bottle hurled by one of the belligerents.

The district attorney was somewhat hampered in his probe by the fact that witnesses to the melee gave the police false names and addresses.

However, the authorities have one witness, Thomas Mattson of Derne street, Beacon Hill. It was Mattson who called the police after he had been forcibly kept away from the telephone by a "bouncer" when the girl had been struck down.

The girl victim was Catherine Cunningham or Cummins of Hemenway street.

The Lambs' club, which for several years has been a thorn in the side of the officials at the Back Bay Police Station, is said to be under the control of Poco Bennet, who re-

FINGERPRINTS LEFT ON SAFE BY CROOKS

Smashing the combination knob off the safe, thugs made away with $300 from the offices of the Sarlis, Taylor & Wood Company, flour dealers, No. 24 Fitchburg street, Somerville.

The robbery was discovered today when the building was re-opened after the week-end. Apparently thieves had worked at their leisure without fear of interruption because of the holiday.

They gained entrance to the building by smashing a rear window and got into the office by laboriously boring holes in the inside office door, removing a section of panel and sliding back a bolt.

Once inside, they dimmed the lights by hanging burlap over them and went to work, shielded in part by freight cars loaded with flour that were lined up outside the windows.

Finger prints on the safe as elsewhere were photographed by Sergeant James Lynch for comparison with criminal records.

Thomas Mattson, of Derne street Beacon Hill, is said to have bee the one who called the ambulanc that carried Miss Cunningham t the City Hospital and later returnec for the three arrested on a charge of drunkenness.

These three persons gave their names as Mrs. Marjorie Conlon, 33, of Clifford place, Roxbury; Mrs. Norma Bergin, 23, of Vernon street, Roxbury, and Robert Crowell, of Dorchester avenue, Dorchester. They will be arraigned in the Roxbury Court today.

Witnesses whose names were gathered by the police are Dell Montague, of Commonwealth avenue, and Mrs. Frances Hurley of Hemenway street, Back Bay. She is said to be an aunt of the injured girl.

Mattson, it is alleged has changed his first tale to the police concerning the injury to the girl and his efforts to get an ambulance for her.

When brought to the Lambs' Club to identify the man whom he at first said barred his exit so that he might obtain aid, he now says he had only been delayed a few minutes while he paid his check and received a rebate for a temporary membership card which he surrendered after his first night's experience at the club.

KOUSSEVITSKY TO PLAY "BULL FIDDLE" AT BROWN

Serge Koussvitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, today announced he would play the contrabass or bull fiddle for the first time in America, at Providence, tomorrow afternoon. Koussevitsky informed President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University he would play the contrabass as a response or acknowledgment of the degree of Doctor of Music to be bestowed upon him. The famous conductor will "say it with music" with one of his own compositions at the ceremonies in Sayles Hall at 4 o'clock. Mme. Koussevitsky will be present and in the academic procession her husband will be escorted by Albert Scott of Boston, who will present the guest of honor to President Faunce.

Womanlike, the countess insisted on window-shopping and sightseeing on Fifth avenue as one of the first things she did on obtaining her temporary release from a deportation order which was issued on the ground that she was guilty of moral turpitude.

The countess, on right, was so overjoyed on finally having the immigration ban against her lifted temporarily that she could hardly believe she was in America. Again and again she hugged her bosom friend, Mrs. Gordon Carr, in ecstacy.

The Lady Vera, in centre, with her friends, Mrs. Gordon Carr, Mrs. G. C. McKinley and Sir Ashley Sparks, craved entertainment after her monotonous sojourn at Ellis Island. much too busy to give any thought to flappers. Charles E. Lathrop, chief inspector of the branch, took up the investigation. He said today that neither he nor State Commissioner W. J. Williams believed that there was any wrongdoing on the part of the office personnel, but they believe that the shortage resulted from the confusion attending the application for number plates at the beginning of the year.

Registrar Goodwin was sternly rebuked today by his superior, Commissioner William T. Williams of the State Department of Public Works.

"The shortages do no justify the registrar's sweeping criticism of the registry," declared Commissioner Williams. "The shortage in Springfield and that in Boston have nothing to do with the clerical forces.

"The whole transaction as regards Springfield involves only one clerk, and he is a man experienced in the business of the office, promoted last year into a position as inspector of motor vehicle traffic, who was serving on account of his experience as an extra man during the rush period of 1926 registration.

"He is doing everything in his power to assist the investigation. The amount of his salary, $1,740, has nothing to do with the situation.

"The loss of $100 from the office of the cashier at Commonwealth Pier in Boston involves only the clerks employed in that office and was in no way affected by their salaries or the salary of the cashier who was away at the time on his vacation."

Commissioner Williams promised a complete investigation and punishment of anyone found guilty.

Thugs Take $8,000 in Shoe Soles From Truck

Theft of thirty-five bags of cut soles, valued at $8,000, was reported to the police today.

The bags of soles were taken with an auto truck during a fifteen-minute absence of the driver, Michael Linskey, who left it at Beverly and aCusway streets while he ate lunch.

On the vehicle were fifty bags of the leather shoe-parts, but when thetruck was recovered hours later in Medford, only fifteen of the bags remained on board.

The truck and soles were the property of F. H. Hunt of Boston, and were consigned to the Brown Shoe Co. of St. Louis, Mo.

POSTPONE VERA CASE FOR WEEK; TITLE FOR SALE

Washington, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Representative Celler, Democrat, New York, suggested today that the offenses of the Countess of Cathcart amount to "nothing" compared with those of the Prince of Wales.

"Why was he allowed to enter?" asked Celler. "His parents are up all night worrying about his night life."

New York, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—No hitch occurred in today's plan of Countess Cathcart's attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays, t obtain a week's postponement of the habeas corpus proceedings in her fight to enter the United States as a visitor. The postponement was granted.

In the meantime the Countess announced that she wishes all good Americans to call her Vera Cathcart, to forgtt about her title and to please remember that she is not a rich woman.

"I am just plain Vera Cathcart and I am not wealthy," she said. "I'm a working woman. If anybody would like to buy my title I would sell it today for tuppence ahrpenny."

'Sudden Death' Note Drives Tenor Gigli to Flight

RUNS TO ESCAPE ENEMIES

Black-Hand Threat Forces Him to Cancel Engagement and Hide

Detroit, Feb 23 (A.P.).—After spending an evening under police guard at a hotel here, Beniamino Gigli, Italian tenor, left for Buffalo shortly after 3 o'clock this morning without filling a concert engagement here.

The sudden departure of the singer was said to be due to blackhand threats made against him.

Shortly before the arrival of Gigli and his party from Chicago, police received a typewritten note signed "true friends of Italy" which said, "If Gigli wants to adorn a slab in the morgue let him try to sing in Detroit. We will cut this canary's throat."

Detectives met the singer and his party at the train and accompanied him to the hotel, where they guarded him until shortly after midnight. Every effort was made to keep knowledge of the threat from the singer, but the police guard gave the secret away and he wrote an open note which he left with the hotel management.

The note left at the hotel said:

"According to the statement made to my secretary by Mrs. Mabel Hurst, my local manager, that an anonymous letter was received threatening personal injury to me, I have decided to cancel my engagement with sorrow to disappoint my beloved Detroit public. But the nervous reaction would prevent my doing a truly artistic performance."

BENIAMINO GIGLI

Two Other Threats to Harm Tenor Gigli

New York, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Beniamino Gigli has been threatened with harm twice before.

In January, 1925, it was learned that Gigli received two letters from extortionists and had been guarded for several weeks by a detective. The first threat was in November, 1924, and demanded that the tenor send $500 to Emile Stadler of Los Angeles for the benefit of "Italian members of the Ku Klux Klan" alleged to be held in prison. The second threat was similar. Gigli then was an honorary captain in the New York police.

COLDER TONIGHT, BUT WARMER TOMORROW

Fair skies with a slight drop in temperature tonight, to be followed by a fair and warmer day tomorrow is the prediction of the local weather man for the next 36 hours in Greater Boston. An extensive area of high barometric pressure, the official harbinger of shrinkage in the mercury tube, covered the Eastern district of the United States today, but the local forecaster asserted its passage over these parts would be swift and of little consequence. The lowest temperature in New England last night was 14 below at Northfield, Vt., while in Boston the minimum over the past 12 hours was 16 above.

3 Plead Guilty in Rum Trial at Cambridge

Directed verdicts of not guilty in charges against two defendants were ordered today in Middlesex Superior Court, where alleged Cambridge rum-running ring members have been on trial for a week.

The not guilty verdicts directed by Judge Flynn were on charges of carrying a pistol against Aaron Hosman, and being accessories after the fact of malicious injuries to two automobiles against Hosman and Simon Adelberg.

Charges of being accessories before the fact of injuries to the automobiles, against David and Aaron Hosman, and conspiracy to sell, transport, and keep and expose liquor against Michael J. and Jesse J. Muchnikoff will be considered by the jury.

The government case against the Muchnikoffs, proprietors of the Brookline street garage, alleged base of supplies, was closed today, and the defence opened with the three other alleged members of the ring pleading guilty to several charges.

The two Muchnikoffs are on trial for conspiracy to sell, transport, keep and expose liquor for sale.

Adelburg pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring to sell, transport, keep and expose for sale, and to being an accessory before the fact to the injury of the machines.

Lawrence Lavan, the driver, was the star witness for the government. He testified the two Hosmans and Adelburg were engaged in a conspiracy to transport liquor from Fairhaven or New Bedford through Cambridge to Chelsea, Revere and Malden. The Brookline street garage, he said, was the base of supplies.

CHAPTER XIX

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 23.—It was late on New Year's Day when I became a prisoner in Washington county jail. I did not sleep much New Year's night. I thought, as I lay on my cot, of the good cheer and revelry abroad in the land.

I thought of my home in West Halifax, of my husband and my mother. I couldn't get mother out of mind. Conscience is a severe master when one is alone. In barred seclusion it's even worse.

That's when the value of an easy mind is best understood and appreciated—in a cell. In jail or prison one's past and errors unfold like a motion picture film. Your misdeeds leer at you. It's hard to shut them out. Torment of mind—the dread realization that you are caged—that you can't get out—drives many mad.

I have too well ordered a mind for such despair. My worry was for those whom I held dear, more than for myself. I had schooled myself to the thought that sooner or later I must face just such an ordeal, and it had come on the dawn of a new year.

I had overheard the remark while being booked at the jail that I was the only occupant of the women's ward and that there were nearly two score male offenders locked up. That meant I would not have to

HOLD HUSBAND WHO FLED WITH NIECE OF 16

Charged with deserting his wife and son and eloping from Chicago to Boston with his pretty 16-year-old niece, Philip Rothas, 38 years old, faced Roxbury court today.

The girl, whose name is withheld by the Boston Evening American, was arraigned separately as a delinquent and also on a more serious charge.

While police bared the story of the alleged runaways, Federal Agents West and Crockwell of the Department of Justice listened in, taking notes and preparing for possible action against the man.

Rothas was held in $5,000 for a hearing March 5 and the case of his niece was continued indefinitely, while she was held in lower bail.

According to the police, Rothas said, when arrested, that he left his wife $7,000 and an automobile when he fled from Chicago, on January 11. The pair, it is alleged, came to Boston a few days later and lived for a time in Huntington avenue, later moving to Astor street.

Acting on a tip from an unrevealed source, Traffic Officer John Murphy boarded a street car and arrested Rothas.

WONDER IF AGED MAYO WILL TRY 'COMEBACK'

Suicide, Bigamy and Broken Hearts Mark Manufacturer's Career

New Haven, Feb. 23.—Society here buzzed today with the gossip that Virginius St. Julian Mayo, whose career as a successful manufacturer was liberally sprinkled with romance and tragedy, is free again at the age of 67, having squared accounts with the government.

Mayo, who started off imprisonment for more than six years after his arrest on a charge of bigamy, walked out of Sing Sing a free man after first pocketing the $10 that New York State gives to paroled prisoners and an additional $1.65 earned as superintendent of the prison refrigerating plant. He served nine months.

New Haven awaited with eagerness to see if the man of wealth, whose exposure as a gay Lothario threw the spotlight of scandal into more than one supposedly "nice" home, would return to the scenes of his romances.

HIS TYPIST SUICIDES.

With the suicide of his pretty eighteen-year-old stenographer, just eleven years ago, Mayo's acquaintance with the courts began. The authorities quickly discovered that a beautiful woman, highly thought of in society, had also once been his stenographer and was now the object of his secret love.

The first girl was Lillian May Cook. The second was known as "Mrs. Dudley." Then Susanna Walters, another former stenographer, sued Mayo, naming him as the father of her child, and the suit was settled out of court.

NO. 2 GETS $100,000.

While these troubles were being heaped on the wealthy manufacturer, Mrs. Florence Weeks Mayo of Scranton, Pa., learning that Mayo was known in New Haven as the husband of Mrs. Wilhelmina Meyers Mayo, notified the authorities that she was his legal first wife.

Mrs. Florence Weeks Mayo divorced him, according, it was said, a settlement of $10,000. Wilhelmina Meyers Mayo tried to imprison him for bigamy. She also sued him and was awarded $100,000. Then Mayo married Mrs. Dudley, and eventually went to prison for his bigamous marriage with Wilhelmina Meyers.

WIFE FINDS HUSBAND DEAD IN ROOM BY GAS

Edward Birneman of No. 73 Central avenue, Revere, was the victim of gas poisoning today. Last night his wife prepared a lunch for him and then went to bed, leaving her husband in the kitchen. Today she found him dead on the kitchen floor, an open burner in the gas stove telling the story of tragedy.

Dr. William Marsters pronounced the man dead accidentally. Medical Examiner Magrath was called.

MOB OF 2,000 STORMS BUCHAREST CITY HALL

Berlin, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—Reports of a serious situation in Bucharest have been received here. A mob of more than 2,000 persons is reported to have stormed the City Hall and demolished the furnishings and destroyed large numbers of records, after the Mayor refused to issue election lists. The mob held control of the City Hall for more than a half hour before the police dispersed the demonstrators.

Wilhelmina Mayo, the second wife of the manufacturer. After learning that she was his bigamous spouse, Wilhelmina successfully sued him for $100,000.

Virginius St. Julian Mayo, sixty-seven years old and wealthy New Haven manufacturer. He has just been paroled from Sing Sing on a bigamy sentence.

Florence Weeks Mayo, the first wife, whom he married her at Scranton. Two typists and another woman were her successors.

Mrs. Mayo No. 1 after he had tired of her. A love child and a suicide then marked the philanderling of the rich manufacturer that shocked society.

WHAT MAKES A WILDCAT WILD SCADDEN'S GOT

Uxbridge, Feb. 23.—A wildcat or something has driven the village of Scadden wild and one man, according to reports, was chased so far out of town by the wildcat that he hasn't come back yet.

One Morin, a woodchopper, is the man who left town suddenly, reporting on the way that the wildcat was chasing him. Neighbors, however, profess not to be worried about Morin, declaring he will come back when he hears the wildcat has been killed.

It hasn't been yet, however. Residents declare they see strange green eyes in the darkness, and children come rushing into their homes, crying that they have seen the wildcat. Then there are tales of eerie yells and screeches at night.

Scadden is scared.

Chicago, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—A hint of a new treatment for diabetes as been found in experiments on dogs doctors A. C. Ivy and J. I. Farrell of Northwestern University, have announced. They said they had successfully transplanted a portion of the pancreas into glands of the dog and it was found the pancreas functioned to such an extent in production a sufficient amount of insulin that diabetes would not occur when the remainder of the pancreas was removed. Secretion of insulin in positive juices was continued by the grafted portion.

2 LYNN LIQUOR HI-JACKERS IN GUILTY PLEA

Lawrence, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—Francis J. Shean and Lawrence Greenleaf, both of Lynn, changed their pleas to "guilty" in Superior Court today, where they were being tried on a charge of stealing $20,000 in choice liquors from the Summer home of Frank Wright, Lynn shoe manufacturer.

The theft occurred a few weeks ago at Hamilton.

Shean was sentenced to from three to five years in the House of Correction, the sentence to take effect at the expiration of a three-year term for contempt of court, imposed a few days ago when Shean attempted to reach a juror.

Greenleaf's sentence was postponed until May because of illness in his family.

Sidney F. Stevens, also of Lynn, who was being tried with Shean and Greenleaf, held to his plea of not guilty.

Wife in Pitchfork Race Wins Decree After 15 Years

George A. Mott may not have known it at the time, but when he chased his wife, Leonora, across the fields in an impromptu steeplechase with a pitchfork, he chased romance right out of his home and his wife into the divorce court.

In Middlesex Probate Court today—some 15 years later—Mrs. Mott told the pitchfork story, with a few more, and procured a decree nisi which makes her free in six months.

Mrs. Mott, who lives in Somerville, charged him with cruelty, neglect and non-support and asked the custody of a daughter, Frances.

Since the filing of the suit, however, Frances has become Mrs. Smith.

VENDETTA IS FEARED IN SLAYING

While a group of police inspectors from Police Headquarters are combing the North End for the brutal slayer of Luigi Militare, whose dead body was found in an alley in the North End, an extra detail of police officers has been thrown into that district and East Boston to guard against possible uprising among certain warring gunmen.

While the police refuse to make known the group of persons suspected of this latest North End murder they fear that Militare's murder will be avenged.

FOUND IN ALLEY.

Militare's body was found in Washington place off Unity street by Patrolman Joseph Hogan of the Hanover street station early on the holiday morning, who stumbled over the form of the man lying face downward on the sidewalk. Examination revealed his head had been battered by some heavy instrument and that two bullets from a 45-calibre revolver had pierced his back.

A ring bearing the initials L. M. on a finger of the dead man led to his identity several hours after his body was discovered. A nephew, Angelo Militare, making the identification.

Police investigation revealed there has been considerable ill feeling existing in the North End against the man who did little work but seemed always to have plenty of capital about his person. When his body was found there was only a small amount of money in his pockets however

FAIL TO FIND CLUES.

Inquiries by the police at No. 418 Hanover street where the dead victim had lived failed to throw any light on the strange case. Police officials have abandoned any idea that chalk markings on the wall of the hallway where Militare lived has any possible connection with the murder. It had been suggested that this crude chalk drawing of a dagger may have been set up as a warning sign of the Mafia and that Militare was the man marked for death by this band.

Police say it is more likely that the drawing was the work of children who are in the habit of playing about in front of the house.

According to the police Militare lived with his wife in East Boston up until two years. Mrs. Militare told the police she had promised to return to him if he would take up steady work.

Lawrence, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—The case against Shirley Ingalls, fifty-one, member of the Swampscott water board, charged with larceny of $11,600 in funds of his department was placed on file by Judge Lourie in Superior Court today, thereby ending an unusual chain of events. Since his indictment Ingalls has made full restitution by the sale of his real estate and his insurance policies.

MOVE ON TO GIVE ELOPER CAROL RUMANIAN POST

London, Feb. 23.—Renewed efforts will be made shortly to effect the return to Bucharest of Prince Carol, advices from reliable Balkan sources indicatedtoday. These efforts, it was stated, would come from leaders of the opposition whose triumph in the Rumanian elections forced the resignation of Premier Bratiano. The opposition, including a group of influential Rumanian politicians, has been seeking for some time to oust Bratiano, who, with his brother exercised what was virtually a dictatorship. This group is preparing to make urgent representations to Carol to assume leadership.

SEIZE MACHINE GUN AT INN AFTER FATAL RAID

Mountain View, N. J., Feb. 23 (A.P.)—State police investigating a fight th the French Hill Hotel which resulted in the slaying of a State trooper today announced that a complete machine gun, sent by express to the hotel, had been confiscated. The gun was addressed to Tony Alessio, brother of Samuel Alessio, proprietor of the roadhouse, who was seriously wounded in a fight with troopers who were seeking prohibition violation evidence. Tony Alessio has been sought unsuccessfully since the shooting.

120 ALIEN GANGSTERS ARE SEIZED IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—More than 120 were under arrest today as a result of police raids throughout the West Side "Badlands" for deportable alien gangsters and gunmen. The district has been terrorized the last year by gang warfare. Twenty-one of the men taken in the sudden police attack were designated as government prisoners by United States inspectors sent here on instructions from Washington. The suspects must stand trial for their right to remain longer in this country, inspectors said.

AUTO AS KILLER MAKES WAR AN AMATEUR

Washington, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—Automobile accidents have cost the United States 133,500 lives since 1917—twice as many as were killed in the World War—according to statistics made public today by the Department of Commerce. On the 1925 death list were 24,000 victims 2.5 per cent greater than in 1924.

Unless emergency measures are taken to check a menace that has grown annually since the automobile became the principal means of transportation this year's fatalities will show another increase.

BLAME LIGHT PENALTY.

The automobile fatalities made up about 16 per cent. of the total deaths due to accidents of all kinds in 1925. There were about five deaths to accidents of all kinds in 1924. There were about five deaths to every 4,000 registered automobiles.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has a number of experts at work in co-operation with committees of the street and highway conference to devise methods of restoring pre-war safety.

Responsibility for a part of the fall down in traffic law enforcement is laid at the door of municipal and State courts, through their failure to assess heavy jail sentences against flagrant violators.

JAIL FOR DRIVERS.

Government officials, however, consider the present laws entirely inadequate to meet what was termed by Hoover a "national emergency."

Included in the suggested legislative remedies are the following:

State laws providing prison sentences to persons convicted of driving while intoxicated and for flagrant cases of reckless driving.

Uniformity of State and municipal traffic laws to eliminate widespread confusion among motorists arising from complexity and variations in regulations.

Establishment of a Federal commission for the preparation of model traffic laws.

Compulsory jail sentences for persons convicted of traffic violations which endanger life.

Thirty-three of the twenty-seven cities reported decreases in 1924 and twenty-seven in 1925. In both years fatalities were cut in Cambridge.

SHOOTS 2 COPS IN HEART AS THEY LIE HELPLESS

St. Paul, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Two St. Paul patrolmen were shot by an unidentified gunman in the residence district here early today.

As they lay helpless in the street each was shot through the heart.

The killings came as a climax to a search for robbers who had terrorized the residential section and who had committed seven holdups in three hours.

The slain policemen, John Schultze and Fred A. Poitsch, were patrolling the district in an automobile and had started to investigate a large car when the shootings occurred. Poitsch flashed his light into the machine and was met with gunfire, two bullets hitting him.

As Schultze started to his companion's aid he also was struck.

SCHOOLGIRL, 17, IS HUNTED IN BOSTON

A schoolgirl's attraction to a Boston man is believed to have brought seventeen-year-old Charlotte Morreale from New York to the Hub. The police here were asked to find Charlotte, who has been missing from her Gotham home for four days.

The girl lived at No. 66 East Fourth street, New York, and attended the Rhodes Preparatory School in West 125th street.

According to the police a Boston man was in the school on that day taking notes for something, and Charlotte, it is thought, may have become a worshipper from afar and may have been inspired to come to Boston and find him. Then again, she may be with some girl acquaintances.

The missing girl is five feet five or six inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has a light complexion and dark hair, and wore a blue dress, reddish-brown coat with fur collar and black felt hat.

She carries a scar on the bridge of her nose and another on her left eyebrow.

Lost in Hub Love

Charlotte Morreale, who is hunted by the police, is said to have been attracted to Boston by love. Her home is at No. 66 East Fourth street, New York. She is seventeen.

Albany Mayor Near Death

Havana, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—The condition of Mayor William S. Hackett of Albany, N. Y., was described by his physician today as "very serious," following a marked relapse. The Mayor sustained a severe concussion of the brain and other injuries in an automobile accident a week ago.

GREAT NAMES GRACE WALSH HOBBY BOOK

Thomas J. Walsh, office manager at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, has a hobby.

This hobby is collecting autographs, and Mr. Walsh's position in charge of the office of a big hotel enables him to gratify his hobby to the queen's taste.

"Tommy," as he is affectionately known to a large clientele of hotel patrons the country over, has been collecting autographs for a number of years; even before, he went to war, and before he became office manager. Today his collection is probably the best in Boston.

If you're at all prominent and you arrive at the Copley-Plaza you're pretty certain to be greeted, sooner or later, by a polite bellboy who will request your signature in Mr. Walsh' book.

And he's got signatures anybody would be proud to be numbered among. For example, there's Sir Thomas Lipton, William Tilden, 2nd, Former Vice-President Marshall Vice-President Dawes, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Clara Kimball Young, Rudolph Valentino, Tom Mix, Jack Dempsey, Ed "Strangler" Lewis, Colleen Moore, Mary Miles Minter, John McCormack, John Singer Sargent, and a host of others, including General Pershing, and General "Billy" Mitchell.

Mr. Walsh's collection continues to grow, as week succeeds week. And it's going to continue to grow as long as the prominent men and women of the world continue to arrive.

DEMANDS EDUCATION MEMBER FOR CABINET

Washington, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—To meet the nation's "most fundamental need," the legislative commission of the National Education Association went on record today in favor of the bill before Congress creating a department of education with a secretary in the Cabinet at its head. Declaring the American public school is the "bulwark of our civil and religious liberty," the commission's report, which was submitted to the meeting here of the association's department of superintendence, declared its hearty endorsement of the bill as a means of bringing about co-ordination of government educational activities.

PENSIONS AT 70 LIKE AID IN COFFIN, IS CLAIM

Non-contributory pensions at the age of seventy, recommended by a majority of a special commission which studied the problem for two years, was characterized as "a pension in the coffin" by Wendell P. Thore, at a hearing today at the State House.

Thore urged the age be made sixty for women and sixty-five for men. He would extend benefits in blindness, maternity, invalidity, disability, or unemployment, in conformity, he said, with the promises given by the Republican party "in the Progressives in the 1916 platform. Representative Michael F. Shaw of Revere, on behalf of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, withdrew a bill for contributory old-age pensions with an old age bequest fund.

S., today to consult with the captain of the vessel and lawyers in regard to taking legal action. ELK HERD ARRIVAL AT MIDDLEBORO DELAYED

Middleboro, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—A shipment of elk from the wilds of Montana to the Atlantic seaboard was delayed today, and the 400 animals expected here before noon, probably will not arrive before 4 or 5 o'clock this evening. The last reports received here said some of the elk, being sent to the Nemasket range from the Dixon national bison range in Moiese, Mont., would be watered in Worcester, then taken to Framingham, where others would be given a chance to drink. They are being sent here to provide elk meat for Easterners.

the police station going down to and including the waterfront? A.—Yes.

The witness said in answer to questions that his route included Williams street, Medford street, Front street, the Metropolitan Garage and the Front street landing, allowed landing place of liquor from a three-masted schooner.

Q.—How long were you on that route? A.—About a year and a half.

Q.—Before you were appointed sergeant? A.—Yes.

The witness was questioned about his appointment as sergeant. He said he was selected sergeant, although Patrolman Elmore headed the list.

Q.—Was it after you were appointed sergeant that you had the talk with the Mayor about liquor. A.—Yes.

SENT BY LIEUTENANT

(Isbester had previously testified that after being appointed sergeant he was called to the Mayor's office and the Mayor told him to prosecute all violations of the liquor laws.)

Q.—Did you go to Mrs. Isenberg's home at No. 1 Suffolk street last night? A.—Yes.

Q.—Looking for Mr. Isenberg? A.—No.

Q.—Mrs. Isenberg? A.—No.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—Officers Brennan, Lynch and Flaherty.

Q.—While there did you see a Miss Bourdreau? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say to her: "Can you imagine that Isenberg, the yellow rat, going over and turning State's evidence after all the protection he was given?" A.—No.

Q.—Did you go over there on anybody's order? A.—Yes, Lt. Bartley sent me.

Q.—What time did you go there? A.—About eight o'clock.

The witness said he saw a gallon jug, freshly opened, at the Isenberg house.

Q.—You say that your first visit to Friedman at the State Prison was about four weeks after he went there? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Friedman said to you: 'If you go out and help me do a job on Mayor Quigley and his brother Tom I can get my sentence of two and a half to three years revoked? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know of any reason why Friedman thought you could do a job on the Quigleys? A.—No.

Q.—At that time you were a sergeant of the Chelsea police? A.—I was.

Q.—Your only relations with Friedman were that Friedman gave you information about crooks and criminals? A.—Yes.

FRIEDMAN "GOT SORE."

Q.—At the time you went to see Friedman four weeks after he went to State Prison did you know of any investigation being made by Federal authorities in regard to liquor conditions in Chelsea? A.—Only from Friedman's father.

Q.—Did Friedman say: "We'll go in and tell the story of the frameup and his brother?" A.—Not in those exact words.

Q.—Did you know what he meant by "the stuff?" A.—Yes.

Q.—What was "the stuff? A.—Nothing, sir.

Q.—Was there any of "the stuff" you could tell against Quigley and his brother? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You testified that Friedman got sore? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did he get sore? A.—Because I wouldn't do this to help him out.

Q.—Do you mean to say that it was because you wouldn't go in and perjure yourself against Quigley and his brother? A.—That's just what I mean.

Q.—If that's the reason he got sore why did you have anything more to do with him? A.—For a certain reason.

Q.—What was the reason? A.—He gave me information in there from prisoners who were brought in from time to time.

Q.—You testified you had some talk with Friedman about Tug Wilson, and that the occasion was on your second visit to Friedman in State Prison? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why were you interested in Tug Wilson? A.—I'm interested in every criminal.

Q.—You had a conversation with Friedman in 1922 about Tug's appreheusion? A.—Yes, and his confederate.

Q.—What did you do after that in regard to helping Friedman? A.—I did all I could, sir.

PUZZLED ABOUT "THREAT."

Q.—Did you go and tell the authorities what you had learned from Friedman? A.—Yes. I went to assist District Attorney Alpert of Suffolk County.

Q.—Who prosecuted Friedman in the three-year case? A.—Mr. Alpert.

The attention of the witness was drawn to the Emerson letter in which a threat was contained according to Isbester's previous testimony.

Q.—What is there in this letter that you considered a threat? A.—The witness pointed to a passage which read: "I think it will obviate him having to send for you and you will be able to help Percy Friedman masterfully." I thought that constituted a threat.

Q.—What did you think that the Federal district attorney could do to you if you didn't come? A.—I thought they'd make me come in here, go through and tell lies.

The district attorney then read from the letter the last line: "Without any prejudice to yourself."

Q.—Did you ever get indignant because he suggested that you should perjure yourself at this or any other trial? A.—Yes, I got angry.

Q.—How many times did you get angry? A.—Twice.

Q.—How many times did you see him at the prison? A.—Seven times.

Q.—You testified that you went there on December 14. What did you go there that time for? A.—I went there after a consultation with your lawyer? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was your purpose? A.—Well, my lawyer told me that Friedman might be able to help me, so that I could rebut any evidence against me at the trial. I couldn't get the information at any other way.

Q.—Did you utterly last week as to a stish interview with Friedman? A.—Yes.

Q.—You went back there at that time to change your mind about helping him out? A.—No, I didn't go back there to change my mind at any time. Percy's father asked me to go over and see him. Hery H. Friedman told me that you, Mr. Williams, would not press my case if I would go through.

Redirect by Attorney Schurton.

Q.—At whose command did you go to the premises of the Isenberg's last night? A.—Lieutenant Bartley.

Q.—Did you make a search there? A.—We went there without a search warrant. We were given permission to make a search.

Q.—Tell us what you went there for and what you did. A.—I was sent there by Lieutenant Bartley. I told them that it was the second call tonight saying that colored men were seen leaving the house. Mrs. Bourdreau said to me: "You can search the house."

TO "CLEAN UP QUIGLEY."

I asked her what was in the gallon jug in the pantry. There were drinks of whiskey in it and it had a very strong odor. I asked her if anybody was buying liquor here, and she said that Mrs. Isenberg was not in business any more. I said: 'What do you mean, not in business any more. Wasn't she in the Roxbury court on a liquor violation the day before she testified in the Federal Court?'

Q.—You mentioned something about a talk with Henry K. Friedman. What was that? A.—He said he was going to New York then to Washington where he had two friends, Katz and Goldman, and that he was going to bring them up to clean up Quigley and his crowd for sending his boy to State's Prison.

The next witness called was Chief Charles M. Finn of the Chelsea police department. He was asked by Attorney Scharton if guns in an auto or had been seized as a result of information Isbester received from Percy Friedman. The witness said four guns were seized.

There was no cross-examination and the next witness was called. He was Patrolman John B. McCreevey of the Chelsea police. He testified he was on the Chelsea force five years. He made a complete denial of all charges, declaring it never demanded or received any money. He also denied he ever as isted in unloading liquor from any schooner.

Many Cases of Grippe Reported in Boston

Local People Urged to Use Vigorous Measures to Combat Further Spread of Deep Grippy Colds.

PNEUMONIA CHIEF DANGER

Grippe Attacks Weaken Body's Resistance to Germs of Pneumonia —All Colds Should Be Treated Promptly.

Deep grippy colds have been unusually prevalent here this winter. The situation is fairly general throughout the States. In some sections these colds are called "influenza," but the majority of health officers report that they are much milder than the original epidemic and resemble more closely the old-fashioned la grippe. They are usually accompanied by a headache or achy feeling over the body, "running of the nose," sneezing and frequently by gastric and intestinal complications such as bicroughs, nausea, diarrhea, etc.

Colds are too often neglected until they have lowered the vitality sufficiently to permit the lurking germs, which cause pneumonia, bronchitis and influenza to attack the body.

Don't Take Chances

The only safe plan is to attack a cold right at the beginning. A hot foot bath, a laxative, followed by vigorous application of Vicks Vapo-Rub at bedtime over throat and chest will often break up a cold over night.

For hours after Vicks is applied the vapors of camphor, menthol, eucalyptus, thyme and turpentine, released as vapors by the body heat, are inhaled directly into the infected air passages. At the same time it warms and stimulates the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" the soreness and pain.

It is an obstinate cold indeed that can resist this direct, double action.

Vicks Vapor Steam

If the air passages are badly stopped up, try the "teakettle and towel" treatment. This method—fully explained in the directions—consists briefly, of vaporizing Vicks in a teakettle and arranging a newspaper "tent" over the patient's head so that the combined warm steam and medicated vapors can be inhaled.

Mothers especially appreciate Vicks for the frequent colds of children, as it can be used freely and safely, without disturbing the digestion—you just rub it on. Over 21 millions jars are used yearly.

DEAREST ANNE:

Washington's Birthday has come and gone—and at last I have a few minutes to write and tell you about all the shopping I did this past week.

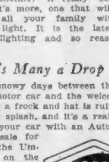
Edison's Newest Lamp

As I was going by the Edison Shop at 39 Boylston Street the other day, I saw just the kind of lamp I have been hunting for for ages. It is most unique. A porcelain light diffusing bowl inside the shade emits a soft, warm glow downwards, inverting the rays so there is no glare. It is wonderful! The stand itself, designed after an old Spanish masterpiece, is finished in antique hammered gold and really a very fine piece of craftsmanship. The shade, a lovely thing of soft colored Chney silk has the best quality burnt-orange silk lining and trimmed with neutral harmonizing braid, 29 inches high, just right for the library table.

And think of it, only $17.50 complete! It is hardly believable. The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston will demonstrate this lamp for you in your home or in their shop at 39 Boylston Street. I wish you would go in and see it, my dear. It is a wonderful acquisition for any household and may be purchased on easy terms, charged on your light bill if you are an Edison Service customer. A really beautiful lamp and, what's more, one that will save the eyes of all your family with its clear, glareless light. It is the latest development in lighting and so reasonably priced.

There's Many a Drop

—these rainy, snowy days between the protection of the motor car and the welcome of the door. Many a frock and hat is ruined by that momentary splash, and it's a real economy to supply your car with an Autobrella, which are on sale for $5.95 each at the Umbrella counter on the First Floor at Filene's. The Autobrella comes in a smart steel case, which screws to the bottom of the car seat so that it's always there when you need it—and it's an ample umbrella of heavily waterproofed material that will protect the flimsiest frock from the gustiest rain. At the same counter at Filene's there are these pretty Japanese-looking umbrellas, in gay colors to match your raincoat—they are called Hermittes, and are for sale for $4.95 each. No longer need you look dreary in wet weather—with a bright-colored Hermittte to match your rain-coat, you can look as gay and pretty as you please.



You Can "Charleston"

—all you like if you wear "Holeproof" hosiery. Talbot's on Washington Street is the only place they are sold in Boston and they are having a wonderful sale now of these stockings for only $1.00 a pair. Think of it, absolutely faultless, flawless and fine. Beautiful lisle thread and fine silk fitting hosiery at this remarkably low figure means that you can well wear and absolutely guarantee—! Anti-ravel tops and doubly reinforced feet of lisle make them wonderful wearing as well as good looking. Lovely new Spring shades at this sale, all lisle and parchment kid. Awfully smart and really a most splendid value. Don't miss such a bargain! $1.00 a pair, or three pair for only $2.85—the price of many another pure silk stocking.

Women are coming more and more to realize that smooth snugness—from ankle, to knee—combined with silken sheerness, makes perfect appearance, and that Talbot's is the place to get these combined in "Holeproof" hosiery.

Mrs. Hendricks Whitman, one of Boston's loveliest young society matrons and an enthusiastic patroness of art and music. Mrs. Whitman is considered one of the best-dressed women in Boston.

Better Foods at Reasonable Prices

Are you acquainted with S. S. Pierce's? They have such awfully good foods and their prices are so reasonable. Everything you buy there, whether it's cereals, butter, flour, canned fruits or the unusual foreign delicacies, is of the very best. And they do have such a variety. You have a choice of enough jams, cereals, canned vegetables and many other articles to serve a different one every day of the month. Do drop in at one of their stores and compare their prices. You'll be more than pleased. Or better still, call them on the phone (Back Bay 7000 or Regent 1300) or write them for their price list.

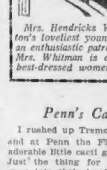
Their confectionery department is unsurpassed—I have never seen so many different kinds of chocolates—90 varieties! Every week I get my personal assortment. It is so nice, all I do is give them my name and they send me the kinds I previously told them I prefer. They have lots of delicious fruits that look so pretty on the dinner or bridge table, and their nut meats are delicious.

Father always gets his cigars from S. S. Pierce. They have a very extensive line of the best Havana cigars. Don't you love the aroma of a good cigar? My brothers won't smoke any other pipes than those sold by S. S. Pierce.

As for perfumes—well, my dear, I think there is nothing like Pierce's "Table des Fleurs." It is delightful and has a subtle charm of its own. The extract comes in three sizes, $1.00, $2.75 and $5.00 bottles. You can also get soap, talcum powder, face powder, bath salts, toilet water, etc., all in this heavenly fragrance direct from France. Do try it—You can get it at any one of S. S. Pierce's shops, Copley Square, Coolidge Corner or Tremont and Beacon Streets.

Penn's Cacti Gardens

I rushed up Tremont Street the other day and at Penn the Florist's I saw the most adorable little cacti gardens planted in bowls! Just the thing for my conservatory, so I went into their lovely shop at 124 Tremont Street and bought one.



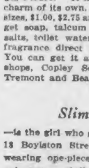
They are simply fascinating—a miniature rock garden is cemented into a bowl and out of every nook and cranny a different cactus blossoms forth.

It has taken years for Penn the Florist to perfect these little gardens and the most exquisite flowers come out of the furry cones and prickly long ears of lovely spreading cacti. The flowers are pink, yellow, lavender and crimson and many are far more beautiful than an orchid.

These little cacti gardens come from $4.00 to $25.00 and will last indefinitely and will have blossoms, all different, at some time or other consecutively all through the year. They are most unusual and I know you would love one. They thrive in any temperature and are beautiful as well as unique all their lives. Do go into Penn's and get one.

Slim and Stylish

—is the girl who goes to the Ivy Corset Shop, 18 Boylston Street. Now that we are all wearing ope-piece straight line dresses why not wear a girdle and brassiere combination in one piece? Most comfortable, and support is given where it is most needed. The Ivy Corset Shop has beautiful satin models with lace panels at the sides for ease, also cotton ones that are easy to wash and perfect fitting, and only $4.50 up! Boston's fashionable women make a point of being fitted at the Ivy Corset Shop—there is no place where your prices fairer.



Away extra weight! It will disappear in no time if you wear the Ivy reducing girdle. No bones, all best quality, fine, heavy elastic webbing, giving perfect freedom and reducing by message, not perspiration. Inexpensive. Have you seen Helen lately? She has been wearing one of these girdles and looks ten years younger, slim and girlish again. Don't forget—Ivy—it clings!

No Wonder

—that Plotkin's is a shop that finds more and more favor every day with Boston women who like to wear lovely things and save money at the same time. I've noticed so often that the salespeople at Plotkin's take a sincere interest in finding for you what you really want—what is most becoming—and for what you wish to pay. They will even tell you in advance about prospective reductions—and reserve things for you until the sale takes place! It's this spirit that has made Plotkin's so increasingly popular with Boston women of taste, and makes it such a pleasant and profitable place to do one's shopping.

Gay as the Birdies

—are the hand-made frocks for the little miss between the ages of 2 and 16. Mary Louise Shop, Inc., 240 Boylston Street, on the fifth floor of the Thorndike Building, has charming little models in gay colorful the prints for $7.50 up to $14. The Ping-Pong, a bloomer dress in fascinating lavender, yellow, blue, rose and green, is trimmed with white linen and every bit made by hand. The kiddies love them.

Sweet as can be are the little peanut straw hats to go with these frocks, ranging in price from $4.00 to $6.00. Betty would look adorable in one. The models are bound in pastel colorings which harmonize with different dresses. Barbara might like a grownup "Cliche" model like mother's. Go to Mary Louise Shop, Inc., and get the best values in Boston.

$500 SICK FUND FROM COUNTY CORK BALL

Mayo Men's Association Organizes a Football Team

By JAMES WALSH.

Reports of committees in charge of the recent ball of the County Cork Men's Association given at a meeting in Hibernian Hall, Charlestown, indicate the affair was the most successful ever held by the organization. The association distributed about $500 in sick benefits. BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Many Social and Intellectual Lights Turn Eyes on Athens

IN THE VANGUARD OF A most unusual and highly important pilgrimage to Athens, Mrs. Charles H. Hawes (Harriet Boyd Hawes of the Wellesley Faculty) sails today on the steamship Columbo bound for Greece and the coming dedication there so vastly interesting to scores of Americans—that of the Gennadeion Library of the American School of Classical Studies.

MISS MARY N. HAWES, now a schoolgirl at Miss Winsor's, sails with her mother on the Columbo and later, amply in time for the dedication on April 23, they will be joined by the son of the house, Alexander Hawes, a Princeton student, who will go into Egypt for archaeological studies.

SAVANTS FROM numberless American centres of learning are converging for this most auspicious of occasions. And the story of the library, its beginning and its building reads like unto a romance in keeping with the finished glory of white marble now set on the Athens hills.

BUILT to house the magnificent gift of books and manuscripts given to the school by Joannes Gennadius, Greek statesman, it is a stately shrine on the slopes of Mount Lycabettus, a mecca for tireless Americans.

IT OVERLOOKS the Acropolis, commands a superb view of the harbor of Piraeus and the more distant Isthmus of Corinth. The name of that American statesman, Elihu Root, is woven into the narrative of the library's beginnings, also that of the Rockefeller Foundation.

MARBLE MASONS, old in the ways of cutting marble by hand, were employed. The marble itself had to be brought from the Island of Naxos since the world's most famous marble quarries, near Athens on Mount Pentelicus are not being worked.

OLD WORLD artisans, joined into bands much like the old Guilds, have toiled for two years to achieve this handsome structure, guided by architects and contractors of New World origin. A monument of which Americans may well be proud.

THE STEAMSHIP DeGrasse, sailing tomorrow for French ports, takes a New England contingent of late-Winter travelers whose journeyends are varied and most promising of gay European jaunts.

MISS EDITH NEWMAN is taking a car and will proceed on a leisurely motor journey. Mrs. E. Fielding Jones of Providence is a passenger on the DeGrasse. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke Lewis of Sutherland road, Brookline, are booked to sail.

ALSO, MRS. JOHN L. SALTONSTALL and Mrs. John S. Parker, two young matrons of the Smart Set, are planning to sail away on the DeGrasse for a Spring in Europe. The French Consul, J. C. J. Flamand and Madame Flamand will be aboard.

THE DEGRASSE contingent also includes Miss Elizabeth Maley and Miss Theresa Maley of No. 22 Marlboro street; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace E. Howe, Mrs. Hallie Barnes and Iselin N. Barnes, Providence, and Miss Helena Bellas of the Villa Margherita, Charleston, South Carolina.

MISS BELLAS will join the Sortwell party of Wiscasset, Me., now in Europe (they went over some weeks ago) and after traveling a bit they'll all come home together in June.

WINTER RESORTS of the South continue to call the tourist to spots where the sun is bright and seas are blue. The Rev. Thatcher R. Kimball and Mrs. Kimball are at Nassau in the Bahamas, making the New Colonial Hotel their headquarters until late March.

MISS HELEN PAINE, daughter of the John B. Paines of Boston and Weston, a niece of Mrs. Kimball, is in the Southland under Mrs. Kimballs' chaperonage. Other Bostonians have embarked for the sun-lit Bahamas.

A PARTY SAILING on the liner Pan America included Judge Robert Grant and Mrs. Grant of Bay State road, Livingston Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hodges, and Mr. and Mrs. George Upton.

PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE taking apartments at Alden Park Manor include Dr. Emilio M. Martinez, from Havana, who is established in Charing Cross and Dr. Edward C. Goldcamp of Warren, O., in Belden Cross. Dr. Edward C. Cayce of Nashville, Tenn., is at No. 419 Charing Cross.

BOSTONIANS PUTTING up at the Roosevelt while in New York, have been Mrs. John E. Thayer, Dr. and Mrs. Loring E. Swain of Chestnut Hill, Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Bacon and Mrs. Webb White.

HART TOPS BIG ORPHEUM BILL

"Tumbleweeds," with William S. Hart again shooting with his accustomed vigor and accuracy, is the film feature at the Orpheum. It is a tale of the settling of the Cherokee Land strip between Oklahoma and Kansas by homesteaders, the removal of the great cattle herds and the bitterness between the herders and the settlers. Barbara Bedford appears in support of the star.

GLENN HUNTER AT NEW BOSTON

"The Little Giant," starring the youthful and talented Glenn Hunter, is the film feature at the new Boston. It is an interesting story of an adolescent "know-it-all" who finally comes to the wise conclusion that he knew comparatively little.

It is adapted from Hugh McNair Kahler's story, "Once a Peddler," and is outstanding for the human interest and truth it portrays. The supporting cast includes Edna Murphy, Dave Higgins and Jim Bradbury, Jr.

'THE FAR CRY' AT OLYMPIA

"The Far Cry," with Blanche Sweet, Jack Mulhall, Hobart Bosworth and Myrtle Stedman as the featured players, tops the film menu at the Olympia. Though these members of the cast perform in their customary excellent manner, the success of the picture is mainly due to the young Italian director, Ballioni, whose outstanding work in European films has won him recognition on this side of the water.

The story of "The Far Cry" is of the works and pomps of an American family who, through long residence in European capitals, have become weaned away from the manners and customs of their own country. The love of an American artist for the young daughter supplies the conversion for all hands. A feature is a gay banquet scene, done in natural colors, which ends spectacularly in a fierce conflagration.

The vaudeville program is headed by Diani and Rubini in a musical act.

HOME FOR BABY IS FOUND IN ROSLINDALE

Couple, Unwed Mother and Kindly Woman Laud the American for Aid

A tiny girl-baby for whom a home was sought through appeal to the readers of the Boston Evening American is cooing happily today in a Roslindale home, watched over by a foster mother, whose joy is boundless.

A young Roslindale couple with no children of their own were among thirty who, in response to the appeal, asked to be permitted to adopt the little girl.

They were allowed to see the child, because their letter, together with a few others, especially struck the fancy of the mother, and their earnest plea for the right to become its foster parents made a hit with the mother and also with the woman who, acting for the unmarried mother, took upon herself the task of finding the right home for the baby.

Other kind readers who offered the waif a home are thanked by all concerned. For the child's sake, the names of her foster parents are being withheld by the Boston Evening American, just as the names of the baby's mother and her generous friend were withheld at their request.

The child is hardly a month old and will never know any father or mother except the parents who have adopted her, and to them she will always be their "very own."

"It really is a wonderful thing to think that our baby has found her home and parents through the Boston Evening American," said the young mother's friend. "All of us—the baby's mother, foster parent and myself—are exceedingly grateful and will always feel that happiness came to us and to the child through the kindness of the American."

TUBERCLE BACILLI BLAST GIVES DISEASE TO EXPERT

London, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Dr. Henry Spahlinger, who claims to have discovered a method for curing tuberculosis in man and geese, is recuperating on the Riviera from an illness believed to have been due to breathing tubercle bacilli in Geneva, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail. While experimenting a short while ago a test tube containing millions of tubercle bacilli exploded and filled the air with them. His assistants rushed out of the room, but Dr. Spahlinger would not leave until he had placed his priceless cultures in a place of safety.

Black satin, so slenderizing for the larger woman—the woman who wears 40, 42, 44 and 46—has its place in Fashion because—

First, it is black, a color that has returned to favor with the Paris openings. Second, it is satin itself—a fabric used by French designers as important at Vionnet Drecoll, Patou, Chanel. Even if it were not a high Fashion on these two counts, the fact it is shown in the jumper style is enough to make it fashion-right.

MITZI OFFERS WIDE VARIETY AT SHUBERT

"Naughty Riquette" Musical Comedy of More Than Passing Quality in Its Melody

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

SEEING is not always believing —in the cold, hard figures that count. Nevertheless—and all that—Mitzi and her "Naughty Riquette" should inspire a flood of new inspiration for those who prefer their drama with music, for those who are still able to laugh at the right moment and for those who are of free and open mind on the duties of a highly trained dancing, singing, acrobatic chorus.

"Naughty Riquette" stirred a whirlpool of gaiety for a big holiday audience at the Shubert. It was a friendly gathering, as holiday audiences always are, but also there were unmistakable signs of discriminating interest in the long parade of events that raced merrily through the performance. Boiled down to essentials, you discovered a musical comedy of more than passing quality in its melody, for which a new rose may be pinned upon the already well decorated breast of Oscar Straus. Adapted from the German of Fritz Schanzer and E. Welisch by that prodigious playsmith, Harry B. Smith, there were early indications that although the locale and treatment of the story were ardently Gaelic, the comedy, as it passed across the footlights, was ripe in Broadway expression.

PERFECT TALENT MATING.

The frolicking Mitzi had much to do besides adding color and exhilaration to the proceedings—also she entered the arena in artistic competition that would have chilled a less courageous soul. While it was not exactly a free-for-all contest, the merry little lady of many brilliant seasons was persuaded to mind her step and pay some heed to Stanley Lupino, a new comedian from that dear old London. It was a perfect mating of kindred talents—Mitzi the hoyden, Lupino the clown.

Let's call it a rare combination, for Mitzi returned to us in better form and with rising personality, while Lupino—almost a rough and tumble comic—made it a perfect day by bringing forth many new faculties in fun making. He made his way through "Naughty Riquette" like an acrobat turned actor or, perhaps, a turbulent comedian trotting along chastened and purified lanes. In any case the stamp was emphatic.

OLD FRIENDS.

Old friends piled their trade with Mitzi—piled them faithfully and well. George Schiller, a veteran of many Shubertian campaigns, more than held his own in the brisk rivalry of levity and song; Audrey Maple, the blondest actress we have ever noticed, raised a voice that was pure and sweet, and always in tune; Alexander Gray toiled incessantly as a singing Romeo—and that is about all.

Mitzi it must be conceded, has fallen into good hands in her new management, for "Naughty Riquette" presented a much wider variety of spirited entertainment than any of her previous excursions into these regions. And it was no hardship to be flanked on one side by the bouncing Stanley Lupino and on the other by the friskiest chours since "Little Jessie James." Introduced a new brand of activities for the rank and file.

"Naughty Riquette" is well worth your attention—and your toll.

'DANCING MOTHERS' ULTRA-MODERN

Clara Bow and Alice Joyce star in "Dancing Mothers" a film picturing what jazzomania does in the home. It is at the Metropolitan all week.

METROPOLITAN FILM STORY OF MODERN LIFE

Herbert Brenon, the film director with a way all his own, continues doing what might be termed the unpen tenor of his ways; for, in filming "Dancing Mothers," now at the Metropolitan, he has strayed far from the regular paths of cinema procedure in telling a conventional story in a manner quite new to the screen.

In spots it is positively brilliant, with the work of the central figures of the cast contributing in no small measure. Clara Bow does much with her flapper role of "Kittens," a most annoying little "modern," whose ungovernable behavior forces her despairing Mama (Alice Joyce) to don the war paint of the smart set and attempt to show up the erring family. Conway Tearle brings the skill of his long experience with this type of play and manages to make a real human person out of his semi-rogue character. On the stage, Eddie Elkins' jazz band and Gus Edwards' revue, "The Golden Girls," pleases with song, syncopation and dance.

'BEN HUR' MOST SPECTACULAR FILM OF DAY

Twenty-five years is a long time, but out of the first-night throng who witnessed the Boston premier of "Ben Hur" as a film at the Colonial, there were at least a few who realized that they were participating in a bit of theatrical history. It is just a quarter of a century since this old playhouse first opened its doors for a performance of the greatest spectacle of its time —"Ben Hur."

The largest of all its "big" scenes is, of course, the famous chariot race in the Circus of Antioch. This set alone would be sufficient to distinguish the production, but the spectator has little time to let his eye travel the full length of the enormous white amphitheatre that holds the vast crowd, before he is transfixed by the astonishing realism of the madly racing chariots.

Director Fred Niblo enables the audience to "accompany" the contestants through the swirling dust of the circus, they see a close-up of Messala's wheel being torn off.

'HAY FEVER' AT COPLEY WELL PRESENTED

"Hay Fever," at the Copley, scores a Boston triumph for that clever young playwright, Noel Coward.

Mr. Coward undoubtedly knows how to mix his dramatic ingredients and how to burlesque his fellow creatures. He is at all times the cynical author laughing up his sleeve at the gushing admirer. One fancies that he takes a delightfully perverted sense of pleasure in his characters when he sets a group of average persons, including a flapper and a diplomat, down to a week-end party with a family of erratic, mellow-dramatic "Bohemians."

Jessamine Newcombe, as Judith Bliss, a retired actress, gives a creditable performance of the somewhat difficult burlesquing of the "Paula" type of woman a la Barrymore, May Edies and Alan Mowbray are quite flawless in their brother and sister roles.

"Hay Fever," as a whole, is a play well cast and acted. The dialogue is clever and highly amusing with no trace of dullness in its entire length.

PIANIST MAKES AMERICAN BOW AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky conducting in its third concert in the Monday evening series played for purely orchestral numbers, three pieces which have appeared on the recent programs of the regular series—Vivaldi's E minor Concerto, Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," and Respighi's "Pines of Rome."

The soloist was Irene Scharrer, an English pianist who made her American debut, playing the piano part in Schumann's Concerto in A minor. Her performance was a finished one, almost a brilliant one, though brilliance is not needed in this piece, primarily. Miss Scharrer's style is in many ways reminiscent of that of her compatriot, Myra Hess. The orchestral part of the Concerto was unevenly done, at times striking fire, but often, as in the third movement, not being sympathetic.

PLENTY OF FUN AT KEITH'S

Keith's has a brilliantly funny bill this week, with the comedy interspersed with high-class novelties.

Probably the greatest hit is El Brendel and Flo Bert in "Just Gus," a restaurant comedy based on Jack Lait's "Gus the Bus" stories. They were assisted by Weber and Ridnor.

They are closely seconded by Jack McLallen with "Sarah" and Fred Sanborn, an old act, but ever welcome.

Others who scored heavily are Fred and Hazel Gardner's Maniacs in which pedigreed bull dogs and bull terriers are featured; Jack Merlin and Lois Evans in "Just a Lot of Laughs"; Virginia Rucker & Co. in "Four for One," assisted by Carl Shaw, Roberts, Rose and Gene Jenkins.

Blackface Eddie Ross repeated his previous big hits and always left 'em laughing when he said good-bye and thrilled them all with his "African Harp," a real, old-fashioned fivestringed banjo.

CLEVER SATIRE AT REPERTORY

What is generally regarded as George Bernard Shaw's cleverest satire—especially from the standpoint of inventive dramaturgy—is presented at the Repertory Theatre in "Caesar and Cleopatra."

This glorious joshing of history—the history that seems to insist on accounting for the sixteen-year-old queen of Egypt as a mature and sophisticated woman—is literally done to death by Shaw in his sharpest mood. In his hands Cleopatra is a typical wilful child, a cute and cuddly kitten, but nevertheless, with claws that scratch deep. Mary Servoss, a recent and capable addition to the company, did the role and did it well.

Next in line for the acting honors was Ralph Roberts in the hilarious character of Britannus.

RAY IN SMART SET ROLE

Charles Ray does the fair raiment of the smart set and appears as a gay young millionaire of easy persuasion with the ladies in "The Auction Block," now at Loew's State.

It is an elaborate and dramatic picturization of the Rex Beach novel of the same name, with the personable Eleanor Boardman in support of the star as a beauty contest winner who also walks away with the hero's heart. Included in the cast is Sally O'Neil, who is featured as a most promising screen "find."

Continuing Shows

CASTLE SQ.—"Abie's Irish Rose." A comedy of ardent love and mixed religions.

WILBUR—"Is Zat So." High speed comedy of society and the squared circle. The last week.

MAJESTIC—"The Big Parade." Romance of the great war with a full measure of high explosives.

PLYMOUTH—"The Judge" Hodge in "The Judge."

'THE OUTSIDER' AT ST. JAMES

"The Outsider," featuring Jacqueline Logan and Lou Tellegen, is the feature picture at the New St. James. The story is of gypsy romance and adventure with a pretty English girl as the central figure.

The vaudeville bill is headed by Bert Baker in a one act farce comedy called, "Prevarication"; Ed Schofield and dancing girls appear in "A Fantasy Of Song And Dance"; two musical comedy favorites, Arthur Babcock and Ella Dolly, have a bright comedy skit entitled "Greenwich Village." Charles Hector and his orchestra make a decided hit in their overture, "The Evolution of Dixie."

"THE BIG PARADE" TREAT FOR STATE PRISON FOLK

The State prison inmates at Charlestown, numbering 840, by request of Warden Hendry and through the courtesy of the Majestic Theatre and the Metro-Goldwyn Corporation, were privileged to celebrate Washington's Birthday by having presented to them the complete film of "The Big Parade," as now being shown at the Majestic.

'HIS PEOPLE' AT FENWAY HIT

As might be expected, the film debut of Rudolph Schildkraut, made in "His People," now at the Fenway, is a notable contribution to the art of screen drama.

The story is one similar to "Humoresque," a tale of Jewish life in the Ghetto, with Schildkraut cast as a noble and benign old rabbi who never quite gets used to the pranks of American life. The conduct of his two sons adds to his mystification. The one, a studious chap who makes a success of his law practice but is ashamed of his parents, and the other, a far less spectacular soul inclining towards the rewards of prize fighting, but with true filial devotion.

CHARLESTON CONTEST AT ORPHEUM TONIGHT

The amateur Charleston contest originally scheduled to take place last night at Loew's Orpheum Theatre and which was postponed owing to the holiday, will be held tonight. All those who desire to participate in this event are asked to appear at the stage door. Gold prizes are awarded the winners and these are judged by the volume of applause received from the audience.

$38.50 BUDGET FOR FAMILY OF FIVE

Careful Distribution of Food Costs Will Permit Good Living

From the northern border of our State comes this letter:

"I am a member of your Women's Club and would like you to help me plan a budget. I have three children, 3½, 2½ and baby 6 mos., besides husband and myself. My husband earns $38.50 a week, and I can't save any money. These are my weekly expenses: $6.75 for rent, $2.85 for milk, $1.42 insurance, 50c for papers, $5 for furniture. I do all my own work including the washing. I never go to a show or any amusement and my husband never spends any money. I am really discouraged and would appreciate any help you can give me."

Cheer up, dear lady. While $38.50 won't cover really riotous living, it certainly can be stretched to feed and clothe you all nicely.

I think it must be in your food budget that the leakage is, for your other expenses are well balanced. According to a scientific budget, you could spend $7.70 for rent, $9.63 for food, $5.77 for coal, light and telephone, $5.77 for clothing, and $9.63 for miscellaneous, which includes $1.42 insurance, 50c for papers, $3 for furniture, $1 for savings account, and balance for dentists, doctors, medicines, charity and amusements.

Since you pay only $6.75 for rent, you have an extra dollar to spare there which should go into your food budget, thus giving you $10.60 for food. As you say, milk is your most important item. The recipe books I am sending you for cooking economical cuts of meats, macaroni, dates and cereals will help you plan your meals I am sure.

Out of every dollar spent for food 20 cents, or less, should be spent for meat, eggs and fish; 20 cents or more for milk, 20 cents or more for cereals and bread, 20 cents, more or less, for vegetables and fruit, and 20 cents or less for fats, sugar and other groceries.

Let's see how this will work out with your $10.60. (Of course it may be a little more if you can slice a dollar or two off your clothing or operating allowance.) You will put $10.60 in an envelope each Monday morning for your grocery money, and out of it you will pay $2.85 for milk, $2.12 for meat, eggs and fish, $2.12 for cereals and bread, $1.61 for fruit and vegetables, and $2.12 for butter, sugar and other groceries. Watch the sales carefully, read and be guided by the books I am sending you, and I am sure your financial problem will soon be straightened out.

Good Food Values in and Around Boston

WHEN TIME'S FLYING

IT'S WONDERFULLY HANDY to have a can of mushrooms on the shelf. Makes a royal dish of homely hamburg. Big can of solid, meaty mushrooms 60c. An epicurean treat. No trimming or paring necessary. Just add to your sauces, or brown a bit in butter.

OR IF YOU PREFER them fresh, I-Know-Where they're 30c for a big half pound box full. A meal in themselves.

I'VE FOUND ANOTHER luscious filling. For cream puffs, eclairs, cream pies and cakes. Sprinkle with the new moist shredded cocoanut for pies. Or serve as a cold dessert with crushed canned fruit. Makes a delicious emergency dessert poured hot over stale bread or cake crumbs. Twelve cents.

TREAT YOURSELF to something delicious, and help that cough at the same time. Pure Vermont honey on cream of tartar biscuits "can't be beat." In comb or bottles. The real thing. 39c for 12 delicious ounces. No relation to ordinary brands.

THE CALORIE-COUNTER may indulge in toothsome bran wafers, chocolate covered. Healthful bran and other parts of the wheat covered with purest chocolate. Endorsed by physicians for adults and children. A delicious health confection. 5c a big cake. Eat one daily for that "ounce of prevention."

A COMBINATION POLISH for silver, porcelain, brass and copper is a space and money saver. 25c and worth 75! Absolutely harmless. You'll find it a valuable ally for Spring cleaning.

DID YOU KNOW that in a little shop near Adams Square you can find every herb that ever grew? Boston's most unique and fascinating drug store—really an herb store.

FOR INSTANCE, a 25c pkg. of loose, dry herbs, makes two quarts of good, old-fashioned, beneficial Spring tonic. Make it at home yourself, where water is free, and know what's in it.

THIS SAME HERB SPECIALIST will mail you a big bottle of pure cod liver oil extract for 85c. 75c at the shop. Cures Winter colds; prevents complications. Pleasant to take.

THIS IS THE LAST CALL for fresh, Northern turkeys. Small sizes for the small family. 60c a lb. No more real turkey treats for another year.

WHEN ECONOMY COMMANDS, try a delicious supper of corned beef hash—the kind you can have confidence in—a vegetable, two slices of buttered toast, and a jar of chili sauce for 35c. Prepared under the cleanliest conditions.

IF YOU SHOULD AVOID SUGAR in your diet, write me for booklet of specially prepared foods reduced in sugar and starch, ideal for folks with a tendency towards obesity or diabetes. List includes beverages, bran, flours, fruits, vegetables, gelatines, cereals, bread, biscuits, soup powders and other foods. Orders can be sent parcel post.

TO REMOVE STAINS FROM HANDS. For ordinary stains, rub with a piece of lemon or left over grape fruit skins. For stubborn stains, use powdered pumice stone moistened with lemon juice; afterwards use an almond or other hand lotion. Corn meal moistened with lemon juice or vinegar is also excellent for removing grime and stains from hands and nails. If you will pare your potatoes under water, these stains will be avoided.

COFFEE HELPS. To bring out the real coffee flavor, put the ground coffee in a saucer and let it heat in a fairly hot oven for three minutes just before making. Boil strong borax water in your coffee pot frequently to keep it immaculately clean. Always warm the pot before using. When the coffee is ready, pour a little cold water down the spout to settle it.

ELIZA CROSSING THE ICE was no better gymnast than I've been, getting these items for you. If any of them appeal, just clip out the column, mark the items that interest you, and mail me with 2c stamp.

USE CASSEROLE FOR UNIQUE STEW

Did it ever occur to you budgeteers that one of the biggest bargains that your grocer has to offer you is tapioca?

Not the old-fashioned, gluey globules associated in our minds with apples, but the quick cooking variety that will save money for you by turning left-overs into substantial dishes.

Added to the familiar tomato bisque, tapioca lends a "different" and more inviting flavor. The children's oatmeal too seems a new dish when made with equal parts of tapioca, and they seem to relish it more keenly.

A little tapioca added to those berry pies that you are making from last Summer's canning prevents the juices running and makes a lighter undercrust. And how many times have you had a cupfull of vegetables left over from yesterday's dinner, and maybe a few slices of meat—not enough for hash, but too much to waste?

With tapioca and an attractive glass casserole you can make an appetizing dish thusly:

CASSEROLE STEW.

One pound (1¾ cups) left over meat cut in serving pieces, ½ cup quick tapioca, 1 tablespoonful butter, ½ can peas, 4 potatoes, 4 carrots, 4 onions, salt and pepper to taste.

Put all ingredients into a casserole, and bake slowly until the meat and vegetables are tender, stirring frequently. Keep filled with boiling water, and covered. Serve very hot. Any kind of left over vegetables and meat can be used, and if you have some left over gravy, you will not need the butter. A half teaspoonful of beef extract dissolved in half a cup of boiling water will improve the flavor, or a bullion cube or two.

Shall I send you a book full of luscious, economical tapioca recipes?

NEW ELECTRIC VACUUM BIG LABOR-SAVER

Spring cleaning holds no terrors for yours truly. For why? Because I've invested a few of my hard-earned dollars in the latest wrinkle in electric vacuum cleaners.

It has come to us from across the water, bringing with it many virtues. Chief among these is the fact that with this cleaner the "dirty work" can be done with a minimum of elbow grease. The motor and dust bag are encased together entirely separate from the wand. And even mother's littlest helper can push this wand over the rugs, under the lowest furniture and in out o the way corners.

Then there's a brush for the hard-wood floors, a special attachment for upholstered furniture, mattresses, etc., and a soft, round duster brush for draperies dusting and even for cleaning georgette lamp shades.

The owner of one of these cleaners can accomplish her bi-weekly shampoo in jig time, since when she comes to the tedious drying process, a flood of motor-warmed filtered air from the cleaner will gently and healthfully dry her damp locks.

The filter pad in this cleaner is entirely new and worth more than a passing thought from the careful house mother. The pad is placed between the dust container and the motor. It is chemically treated with a very powerful—and pleasant—disinfectant.

To Martha

Some of us want to Budget,
And some of us want to get Thin,
And some of us crave Beauty,
Still others a clear, lovely Skin.

Whatever you want to find out,
From Biscuits to how to get Fat,
Ask Martha Lee, because you see,
She will have the answer down pat!

The fire, which started in a heap of rubbish near the boiler, was checked in the basement, but the heavy smoke damaged stock in the street floor stores.

HANEY RESIGNS, GIVES PALMER A FINAL RAP

Says That Since Latter Quit U. S. Shipping Has Regained Prestige

Washington, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—Bert [illegible], Oregon, resigned as member of the Shipping Board, effective March 1, [illegible] ended a trouble-some situation that has existed since last August, when President Coolidge requested Mr. Haney's resignation on the ground that by proposing to remove Leigh C. Palmer as president of the fleet corporation the commissioner had run "contrary to the understanding I had with you when I reappointed you."

Mr. Haney declined to resign on any such grounds, denied any knowledge of an understanding with the President to support Mr. Palmer, asserted that the chief executive knew of his opposition to Mr. Palmer and declared that to accede to the President's request for his resignation "would carry on an implication which I cannot permit."

In his letter of resignation the commissioner today said he felt that he could properly end his service now, as three months had elapsed since Congress convened and Mr. Coolidge had stated that he would not be reappointed.

The letter declared that since the Shipping Board had "reasserted" its power over the government merchant fleet after the dismissal of President Palmer by majority vote of the Shipping Board, conditions had improved to the point that "American shippers today are being furnished a substantially better service, and foreign shipping is no longer gaining ground at the expense of the government-owned fleet."

N. Y. BEAUTY IS SLAIN; SWEETHEART HUNTED

New York, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—Miss Madina Collotta, 19-year-old Italian beauty, was stabbed to death today by an unidentified assailant in the hallway of her home. Police are looking for Arthur Seone Sardina, 29, said to have been her sweetheart.

BIG GAME HUNTER, ARTIST RETURNS

Mrs. Pauline Boumphrey, formerly a well-known golfer of Brookline, now a noted sculptor of wild animals and big game hunter, landed today from the Cunarder Caronia, and will visit her mother, Mrs. William Firth. Note the beautiful tiger-skin coat and the boots.

CARONIA, IN ICE COAT, DEBARKS 160 IN HUB

Slightly more than two days late, the Cunarder Caronia arrived at East Boston today after one of the hardest passages of the Winter. Spray ice covered her forward deck and rigging, curried during the night spent below with a strong northwest wind blowing. But her lateness failed to detract from the pleasureshown by those of her passengers who landed here.

Of particular note among them was Mrs. Pauline Boumphrey, well known in local golf circles several years ago as Miss Mauline Firth, daughter of William Firth, textile machinery man. Mrs. Boumphrey has gained fame since leaving Brookline more than ten years ago to study sculpture and art in Paris and England. Her work in animal art has gained her high awards and twice she exhibited at the Royal Academy in London and once at the Grand Salon in Paris.

PRIMA DONNA LANDS.

Mrs. Boumphrey, the better to familiarize herself with her subject, spent considerable time in South Africa hunting the wild animal in his native lair. In North and South Rhodesia and in Portuguese East Africa she hunted lions, tigers and other beasts. She will spend a brief time with her mother, Mrs. William Firth, in Brookline before returning to England.

Sybil Vane, the dainty little Australian prima donna, was another voyager. In private life she is Mrs. L. Domke and her husband accompanied her. She comesto Boston in April.

REUNION FOR COUPLE.

Aontherto debark was Mrs. Joan Sandeman, who came for the purpose of greeting her husband, whom she hasn't seen in several months. He won't get here until Thursday, when the Brocklebank-Cunarder Matheran docks at East Boston. The Matheran called at Newport News today to drop the crew of Lascars before coming into the colder zone.

The body of William Keene of Stoneham, whodied as a result of a fall in Leicester, England, was aboard the Caronia.

The liner left for New York late today. She debarked 166 passengers hereand had 300 for New York.

1 SLAIN, 3 SHOT, BY MAD SNIPER IN NEW YORK

Police Believe the Maniac Inspired by the Action of Killer in Omaha

New York, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—New York today developed a "mad sniper" and his toll thus far is one dead and three wounded. All four victims were shot down in the streets apparently without cause. No one saw the assailant. Police believe that some person reading of the Omaha sniper is emulating the Western maniac.

"Happy Jimmy Barnstory, 35, was shot and killed. His companion, Robert Tannon, 28, was shot in the back. Two other men were mysteriously shot.

All the shootings took place on the East Side and ranged over an area of almost 100 city blocks. Detectives believe that some madman started up town and continued down Firm and Second avenues taking potshots as he went.

No witnesses were around who had heard the sounds of firearms at the time the men fell and it is believed that, like the Omaha killer, New York's mad sniper has mounted a silencer on his weapon which apparently is a revolver of heavy calibre.

How to Have Soft, Pretty White Hands
USE ICE-MINT

Many women will undoubtedly be glad to know how they may have beautiful, white, soft, pretty hands regardless of the work they have to do. The secret lies in rubbing a little Ice-Mint into the hands occasionally, preferably just before retiring at night. In the morning you will be agreeably surprised at the pleasant transformation that has been wrought by even a single application. Ice-Mint is made from a Japanese herb that has long been famous for its beautifying properties when used on the hands or face. Regardless of what kind of work a woman does she should have pretty hands, as they are really the true marks of refinement. A few applications of Ice-Mint will actually make any woman proud of her hands and skin. It costs little and is sold and recommended by good druggists everywhere.

ICE-MINT

Stop Cold Now

Hot Lemonade Will Do It

IF you feel a cold coming on, stop it immediately with an old-fashioned hot lemonade.

Don't wait until it is too late. As soon as the tell-tale sneezing starts or you feel "chilly," take a warm bath and get right into bed with plenty of warm covers.

Then drink a large glass of hot lemonade. Drink it as hot as you can stand it. See how much better you feel in the morning.

The effectiveness of hot lemonade in the prevention or treatment of a cold is due to more than heat.

The influenza epidemic proved to thousands the efficiency of this simple, pleasant method. You, too, will profit from this practice whenever you feel a cold coming on.

The time to act is when you first suspect a cold—don't wait for chills and fever. Do it now. Just squeeze the juice of a lemon in glass or cup of hot water. Add sugar if you wish.

California lemons make the best lemonade. They are practically seedless, tart and heavy with acid juice. Buy them at any first-class store. Try the "hot lemonade way" tonight.

FOR Sour Stomach
PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

TRY A 25c BOTTLE

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty-cent bottles, any druggist.

CHAPTER LXIII.

Copyright 1926 International Features, Inc.

THE first week in April, Mary Rose left old Dr. Fitzroy's office and went to work for Jim Morrell's business partner, Cornelius Tuydeman.

(Photo Smart Set Magazine.)

Mary Rose was sure that in her heart it would always be December

Tuydeman was, beyond all shadow of doubt, the handsomest man that Mary Rose had ever seen in her life.

He was dark with the fiery, romantic swarthiness of a Valentino. And wonders of wonders—he was not conceited over his good looks.

He wore loose, shabby suits and dark neckties; and he was so painfully shy that Mary Rose was sorry for him.

"I don't know when I've met any one that I liked as well as I do him," she told Flossie one afternoon, when the two of them returned to Flossie's little flat from a shopping trip.

"Well, then—why not marry him?" asked Flossie, who never minced matters.

"You could, if you tried to," she went on, deftly applying a new paste rouge to her lips as she talked. "For one thing, you're a fool not to wear black. Any girl looks as good looking in black as she is in colors! And Tom's death has given you a perfectly good excuse to dress like a widow."

Mary Rose held up a warning hand. "Hush! she said. "You don't suppose I'd ever encourage Tom do you? You see, I don't mourn for him as a woman would grieve for the only man he could ever love. Tom was my friend but I never would have married Tom if he'd lived."

Flossie stared at her with puzzled blue eyes.

"People are funny things," she said musingly, as she rubbed a little more of the rouge on the bow of her scarlet mouth. "I bumped into Harry Dexter the other day when I was downtown buying baby clothes, and he said the queerest thing to me! I'm still wondering what he meant!" She shook her head in a bewildered sort of way.

The Dangerous Age

"He said he'd always heard that the dangerous age for men was between forty and fifty—and that he'd found out that it lef" she added "I told him he was talking cuckoo, but he just laughed. Sometimes he says the weirdest things!"

Mary Rose laughed, too.

"That wasn't a queer thing to say," she told Flossie. "It's a well known fact that a lot of men—and women, too—have their wildest love affairs during their middle age. I suppose it's because they know old age is just around the corner."

Flossie set her top scarlet lips in a determined line.

"Well, just let me catch Sam Jessup cutting up any didoes like that when he's middle-aged," she cried, her eyes flashing like blue flames "and I'll bet I'll fix him! "It'll be a 'dangerous age' for him, all right, if he does!"

It was a week or two later that Mary Rose saw John Manners once more.

She and Flossie were out walking and as they turned the corner of Dorchester avenue and Ashmont street his car came along and passed close to them.

"There's John Manners! Flossie cried, excitedly pinching her sister's arm. "Right in that car! See?"

Mary Rose did see. She was looking straight into John Manners' eyes—the gray eyes that she loved

'DON'T DARE KISS IN PUBLIC,' MRS. BIMBA

Pope Scorns Italian Terms Without Full Liberties

'INJUSTICE' CITED BY VATICAN

Rome, Feb. 23 (A P.).—Pope Pius' letter to his secretary of State, declaring that no accord between the ecclesiastical and civil authorities can be reached so long as "the iniquitous condition imposed upon the Holy See and the Roman pontiff still exists," is printed textually by nearly every important newspaper in the kingdom today.

The "iniquitous condition" referred to is the deprivation of the Pope's complete liberty and independence, which condition has continued since the formation of united Italy and the fall of the papal temporal power in 1870.

Referring to the work of the Italian commission on ecclesiastical legislation, the Pontiff's letter said: "Time is imposed upon us the duty to declare that, respecting such things and persons, we cannot acknowledge to anybody else the right and power of legislation without previous opportune negotiations for a legitimate accord with this Holy See and with us."

There is almost no editorial comment but the Popolo d'Italia interprets the letter as follows.

"The ecclesiastical experts who participated in the commission's work had authorization of their hierarchical superiors, but received no mandate from the Holy See.

"Outside of praising the ecclesiastical reform the Holy See firmly maintains its historic principle of not recognizing the power of the civil authorities to legislate in ecclesiastical matters unless in accord with the Holy See.

"Adoption of a system of concordat between the Holy See and Italy is impossible until the problem of the juridical situation of the Holy See and Rome is settled."

Il Secolo considers the letter substantially "less hostile" than it superficially seems to be, and declares it might rather be interpreted as a step toward future negotiations.

BEING LAUGHED AT

SOME people are morbidly afraid of being laughed at.

Probably I had the same fear when I was very young, but I have quite forgotten it. Now I am always the first to laugh at myself, as well as at anything else, but never silly—which takes the sting out of it.

The only way to disarm laughter is to laugh first and join as wholeheartedly as possible in the chorus that follows. A fat old gentleman who slips on the ice and gets furiously mad will make the crowd whoop and jeer. If the same old gentleman calmly sits where he fell and shakes with laughter, this is what laughs WITH, not AT him, and makes him a hero.

If people say something I do is funny or ridiculous, I laugh with them, which is disconcerting to those wishing to be unkind and takes the wind out of their sails. And, finally, instead of putting in a disagreeable half-hour, we have an amusing time together and part excellent friends.

Once I remember, one of my own standing tried to turn me into ridicule because I had a military man attached to my party whilst it is usually court etiquette for a Queen to be served by a civilian. Instead of being offended or shy about it, I laughed heartily:

"I became Queen in time of war," said I, "and war in our little country was a bitter business. I did not sit afar off. In safety, receiving news from a distance. I needed a military man in those days because I went where only military people had a right to go. It became a habit to be served by an 'A. D. C.' like the King himself, and finally it was the privilege of one who had 'won her spurs.' This is why I am so fond of a stick to my side-de-camp."

And so we laughed—laughed without ire on either side.

Kindly laughter is better than drugs and medicines. Have a ready laugh at any moment. Laughter that I insist upon (its being kindly), like a soft word, turns away wrath and clears the atmosphere like nothing else.

Learn how to laugh. Learn especially how to laugh at yourself. It drives away the blues. Just try!

DO NATES FRIGATE RELIC

Held in Slaying

Joe Sennetti, who is being held at Pawtucket in connection with the slaying of Jerome Casey, alleged rumrunner, killed while piloting a truck of contraband liquor.

Inspired by the action of George E. Kimball of Nashua, N. H., in offering to restore to "Old Ironsides" (when rebuilt) an old whale oil lantern that once hung at her mast head, Mrs. J. P. Ackles of No 61 Reed street, North Cambridge, is to give naval officials another relic of the old frigate.

This relic is a big wood from the original ship, fashioned like an acorn. It is 14½ inches long and 4 inch in diameter and was handed down to Mrs Ackles from her great grandfather, Thomas C. Byron, of Vine street, Charlestown, who was a musician on "Old Ironsides" during the War of 1812 when the frigate put this country on the map as a naval power.

"I have always been patriotic," said Mrs. Ackles, to a Boston Evening American reporter, "and when I read that interesting story in the American about Mr. Kimball of Nashua offering an old whale-oil lantern that once hung on the ship to the naval officials for replacement on 'Old Ironsides' when restored I decided to do the same with this relic. I think it would be an excellent idea if all persons having similiar articles would do likewise."

"This wooden 'acorn' was the property of my great grandfather, Thomas C Byron of Charlestown, who served on 'Old Ironsides' during the War of 1812, as a musician. He was a fifer.

"The fife he played on the ship during the course of the War is now at Massachusetts State Houses I believe it would be a good plan for the naval officials to try to get the fife back to the old ship and start a private museum. I am sure patriotic Americans would like to view things of this sort.

"According to clippings from Boston newspapers at the time of my great grandfather's death in 1861 he took great pride in telling his friends that he played 'Yankee Doodle' on 'Old Ironsides' during the historic battle of the frigate when it defeated the English ship Guerriere, August 13, 1813.

BIMBA GETS BROCKTON HALL

Brockton, Feb. 23.—While his wife shook her small fist defiantly today at the forces of law and order ranged against Anthony Bimba, the alleged Communist and blasphemer was given a stern warning by the authorities to "watch his step" in his public meetings here tonight.

"I don't even dare to kiss my husband in public in Massachusetts," exclaimed Mrs. Bimba, a bobbed-hair American in her early twenties, as she bitterly rebuked the police for interfering with her husband's expression of religious and political beliefs.

She will sit beside her husband in court when he is tried.

Tonight, on the eve of his trial for blasphemy and sedition, Bimba will find himself looking into the eyes of policemen, detectives and Federal investigators when he speaks at two public halls. Barred in Boston, Pittsfield and Worcester he was granted permission to speak here by Mayor Bent who said he found no way to prevent it.

"But I will run Bimba out of Brockton right after his trial is over, if he is let go free," said Mayor Bent. "I warn Bimba not to overstep the bounds of decent utterance. No seditious or blasphemous remarks will be tolerated for a moment."

Scott Nearing is expected to appear on the same platform with Bimba tonight.

CROWNS 'MR. A.' INDIAN RAJAH

Jammu Kashmir, India, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Magnificent celebrations, rivaling in splendor those of the Arabian Nights, have been proceeding for the past fortnight in connection with the accession of the young prince, Sir Hari Singh, to the throne of Kashmir.

Sir Hari is perhaps better known to the world at large as the mysterious "Mr A." in the sensational Robinson case tried at London a year ago, but apparently Kashmir has chosen to forget this episode in the life of the handsome and dashing heir to one of the greatest thrones in the Indian empire.

The religious ceremony of the coronation of the new Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, as he will be known, will take place on Thursday. The government alone is spending $3,000,000 on the celebration.

The state elephants belonging to the various princes are being prepared for the gorgeous processions in which they will be caparisoned in robes of gold and silver. There will be a display of gems such as has been in no other assembly in the world.

TROOPS GUARD MINE OPENING

Evansville, Ind., Feb 23 (A P.)—With troops of the Indiana National Guard encamped here five non union bituminous coal mines in southern Indiana reopened today after several weeks of idleness.

Only 25 men reported for work however, at the five mines, according to observers for Sheriff Spindley of Warwick county. The mines normally employ several hundred men.

An Indianapolis company of the National Guard arrived at Evansville today and three planes reached the scene from an observation unit at Kokomo. A company of guards men from Greensburg, Ind., also has been ordered to Evansville.

What little activity was possible at the reopened mines with the small force which reported was begun quietly, the sheriff was told, and with no signs of disturbance.

EARL BEATTY PICKED TO SUCCEED BYNG IN CANADA

London, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—Baron Byng of Vimy has not yet notified the British government whether he will accept an invitation, already extended to him, to serve another term as Governor-General of Canada, but it is understood that in the event of his refusal Earl Beatty will be prominent among the candidates. While the Duke of York, King George's second son, is being considered, it is said to be unlikely that he will serve at this time.

AVON SPLIT BY ELECTION ROW

George H. Wood of Avon was arraigned in Stoughton District Court today, charged with circulating a report against a candidate for public office. The case was continued until Saturday.

The citizens of Avon are divided into camps in their support of Wood and Frank E. Brown, former police chief who brought the complaint. Brown, who was dropped as police head last Summer seeks re-election at the coming town meeting.

Brown was brought to Avon from Worcester to become chief of police. He was discharged after a fight raid in the town. Wood was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Howard Capen of Taunton, and yesterday afternoon a meeting of citizens named a committee to obtain certain records regarding the former chief and present them to the voters Wednesday.

Two of the selectmen are opposed to Brown's candidacy while the third favors him.

URGE N. E. FIRMS MARK GOODS

A year of prosperity, greater even than last year, is unreeling with every day it was declared today by Major P. F. O'Keefe, president of the Boston advertising agency bearing his name.

But the year of prosperity should be a New England year, he declared and a year in which New England manufacturers cease the practice of allowing jobbers and middlemen to buy unbranded New England made goods and place their own New York labels on them.

"The New England manufacturer is naturally proud of the goods he turns out," said the Major. "If unadvertised who knows that he makes them? The chances are that his goods are known by the name of some jobber in Chicago or New York."

30 DEGREES BELOW ZERO IN THE ADIRONDACKS

Tupper Lake, N. Y., Feb 23 (A. P.).—A temperature drop of 80 degrees since noon yesterday had sent the mercury to 30 degrees below zero here today. The cold snap followed two days of balmy weather.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 23 (A P.).—Thermometers in this village registered from 22 to 28 degrees below zero today, the lowest readings of the Winter.

OFFICES FLOODED BY BURSTING STEAM PIPE

The premises occupied by the Palestine Foundation Fund at the former No 3 Tremont Row, were damaged to the extent of about $2,000 when a water pipe burst on the third floor. Firemen responded to a still alarm. The building, a [illegible]-story stone structure, is owned by the Olympia Theatre Corporation.

Inside Story of My Split With Kearns—By Jack Dempsey

'Managers Cannot Make Money Out of Bad Boxers'

By JACK DEMPSEY.

CHAPTER 5.

EVER since Jack Kearns and I split up, there has been a debate—

"Did Kearns make Dempsey—or did Dempsey make Kearns?"

The subject can find two different answers, depending upon whether the man is friendly to Kearns or friendly to me. But in all fairness to Kearns, and giving full allowance to him for what he did, I'd like to ask—

Could Kearns—or a thousand Kearns—have made a champion of me, if I couldn't stand up under punishing and if I couldn't hit harder than any man in the ring today?

If Gunboat Smith had knocked me off cut in that first real bout of my career, in 1917, would all the managerial ability in the world have brought me along to where I could meet—and defeat—a world's champion?

Could Kearns have made a champion out of me if I hadn't been able to hit hard enough to knock out Bill Brennan, Carl Morris, Fred Fulton and the others. Kearns got me the matches, yes. But when the bell rang, his part was through. It was up to me. If I hadn't had championship makings, who shall say that Kearns supplied them?

Did Kearns give me a pair of steel fists or a stout jaw and a body that could take a pounding—and still not crumple?

Maybe Kearns "made" me, as he and his friends insist. But if he did, I'll say—and the sporting world will agree with me—that he'd have trouble me in a hurry if I hadn't been able to win fights.

Managers are in the game to make money. They can't make it out of losers. They are quick to cast a loser aside. And it's a copper riveted cinch that if I had been a chronic loser, Kearns would have ditched me as he did other fighters who couldn't win for him.

KEARNS and his friends assert that all that I am, I owe to him. Is that true? They insist that no one else but Kearns could have made a champion out of me. I wonder. Kearns didn't give me the hitting strength I have, he didn't teach me anything of the real art of battling because one must have knowledge himself before he can pass it along to others. And Kearns is no boxing master.

Kearns got me the chance against the Brennans, the Morrises, the Fultons and the others by which I earned the indisputable right to meet Jess Willard. But couldn't another manager—men like Leo P. Flynn, Jack Morgan, Dan McKetrick, Billy Gibson or the others—have done the same thing? Getting matches for me in those days wasn't so awfully tough for no one of the topnotchers took me really seriously and each, in turn, figured he could push over "that tough, rough, wild swinging kid from Utah."

There wasn't an awful lot of heavies of prominence in 1917 and 1918. Those who were at the top wanted action, because action meant money. And they had no fear of me because they thought I was just a wild swinger. They scouted a match with me almost as much as Kearns, in my behalf, sought one with them.

And so, almost overnight, I leaped from obscurity to a certain fame. Was that because of Kearns's brilliant matchmaking—or was it because I, Jack Dempsey, took everything each of the leading heavies had to give, and then knocked them cold?

Great praise has been showered upon Jack Kearns because he secured for me bigger purses than ever were paid to any champion in all ring history. The supposition on the part of the public is that Kearns—and Kearns alone—could have done this. Is that situation really true?

If some one else, a shrewd, capable man, had been managing me could he have done as well as Kearns—would he have done better—or not as well?

ISN'T a little bit of credit due me for being the sort of drawing card that meant big gates and thus influenced promoters to pay me bigger money—in this big money era of pugilism—than was ever paid before?

Didn't my style of fighting which provided fast and furious action and speedy finishes bring out the crowds, irrespective of what Kearns did—or failed—to do?

I think that only one fight in my whole career—the one in Shelby—was a loser for the promoters. What made that so? Did the crowds come out to see Kearns acting as my manager—or to see me fight?

I'll grant Kearns got bigger purses for me than any other manager ever got for a fighter. But could Kearns have succeeded in getting for me larger and still larger purses if I hadn't put up the kind of fights the crowds were willing to pay big money to watch?

Kearns, fortunately, was manager of a heavyweight champion at a time when Tex Rickard was in a real gambling mood. But, if Rickard had been "stuck" even once in the promotion of any of my matches, who shall say that all the so-called shrewdness of Kearns and his cronies would have influenced Rickard to pay me bigger money in my next fight under his promotion?

I think Kearns was a lucky manager. For he was piloting a world's champion at a time when the public was willing to pay fancy gate prices, when Rickard was in a big gambling mood—and when that particular world's champion was making good for both Kearns and Rickard by packing in the crowds.

I cannot say that before I proved myself a good fistic attraction that Kearns did so all-fired well for me. The money I got for fighting Bill Brennan, Carl Morris and Fred Fulton showed no money getting genius on the part of Kearns.

MY PURSES for these fights were mighty small in comparison with the later day offerings to championship contenders. If Kearns was such a great money getter all by himself, how was it that he couldn't get big money in the days before my ability made big money possible?

When Kearns was seeking a shot for me against Jess Willard, it was originally agreed by him that I was to fight Willard without a cent of remuneration. If that deal had gone through, and I had lost, then all I'd have had for my "reward" would have been a beating.

It was only after the match was made, and it looked as if the thing would be a money maker for Rickard, that Kearns became insistent, according to his own recital to me, that I should get some money for my services.

I believe the matter finally was put up to a delegation of newspaper men and it was then decided that I was to be paid $25,000 as a purse, plus $7,500 for training camp expenses. That is how my end of the purse for the Jess Willard fight in Toledo was $27,500 instead of being nothing at all—as Kearns had agreed earlier.

I was paid a guarantee of $300,000 for fighting Georges Carpentier in Jersey City in 1921. My understanding is that Carpentier, instead of receiving $200,000, actually drew down $250,000 from that fight. That, therefore, indicates that Francois Descampe, the pilot of Carpentier, was a smart manager, for he succeeded in getting for a non-champion, who was only a 1 to 4 shot in the betting, within $50,000 of the sum that Kearns received for a champion of the world.

The receipts for the fight were $1,600,000, in round figures—and I received $300,000, Carpentier $250,000 and the promoters $1,050,000.

AS A world's champion, I was paid $300,000 and the promoters took in, in a gross profit of over $1,000,000. In practically every big match that I know of the champion received at least 37½ per cent. of the "gate"—and sometimes 50 per cent.

And the odd thing is that I would have received 50 per cent.—could have received $800,000 instead of $300,000—if Kearns merely had done as I requested and gambled a little, instead of trying to play "a sure thing" which, in the end, cost our partnership at least $500,000.

Rickard wasn't so sure that the bout would be a big money maker. I was confident on that point. Kearns wasn't. We had the chance to take 37½ per cent. instead of the guarantee of $300,000. I was all for the percent-of-the-gate idea.

The receipts were $1,600,000 which, at 37½ per cent., would have meants $600,000 for me and, at 50 per cent., would have made my end $800,000

Tomorrow Dempsey will tell the inside story of how Kearns held out at the Gibbons fight, and about Kearns' bodyguard.

Holiday for Chapman After Herman Bout

By RINGSIDE

THE fact that Washington's Birthday was a holiday meant nothing to Red Chapman of Chelsea and Dorchester. The featherweight's scheme of life permits no holidays for him until after his match with Babe Herman of California, in Mechanics Building, under the auspices of the Commercial A. C., on Thursday night.

"Red" has been training under the watchful eye of Al Lacey, trainer of the American Olympic boxing team, at the latter's new gymnasium in Chelsea. Lacey has always handled the "sorrel-top" featherweight and is one of the shrewdest conditioners and handlers of boxers in the country.

Henry Ford, who went to the Pacific Coast with Chapman recently, has been training with Chapman Ford packs a punch and employs the style similar to that used by Herman, and therefore Chapman should be well accustomed to the boring-in antics of the coast boy when they climb into the ring for the feature tussle of the year on Thursday.

Great interest is being manifested in this match, coming as it does right on the heels of the Herman-Chick Suggs fight, in which the coast boy brought down the classy New Bedford "Black Bird."

Herman and Chapman are considered next in line to Kid Kaplan, world's featherweight champion, of Meriden, Ct., who it is whispered, is putting on weight and is in a fair way to outgrow the class and be jostled into the lightweight division. However, the winner of the Chapman-Herman bout here will be regarded as the logical opponent for a bout with the champion at Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden.

Herman's wicked right hand punch is not causing Chapman any worry. In fact, the Chelsea boy has already mapped out a plan of defense to offset the attack of the coast fighter.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER H. HORTON

In the hitting swing the club, just before it gets into the bottom arc of its downward swing, comes forward from in back of you—seemingly from just in back of the right knee. The club-head then passes through the ball with a feeling that it goes from the inside out—across the ball. It doesn't actually go across the ball, however, but goes straight through. This affect is one of the most important things in the hitting blow, for the ball will never be hit consistently straight and solid with it. Yet you do not strive to get this effect during the hitting swing. You get it by making the back swing correctly.

MEDFORD SEEKS 'TWI' LEAGUE FRANCHISE

By JOE CASEMAN.

Medford plans to put a strong semi-pro nine on the field this Summer and is trying to regain its franchise in the Greater Boston Twilight League.

The after-supper circuit is being reorganized to include only clubs that are near to the Hub and since Medford is much closer at hand than many of the other cities seeking admission, its chances of getting back in the organization are bright.

Gus Gardella, who formerly played with the New York Giants, managed the Pittsfield club in the Eastern League and held down third base for several "Twi" teams the past two seasons, will manage the Medford entry. Gus is a smart pilot, a classy player and has plenty of color. Under his leadership, the club should go big.

Though the opening of the season is three months away, Gus has already signed up Webber Knox and Fred Sargent, a pair of fine pitchers; Dick Phelan, a first-class catcher; Eddie Morton, an infielder, and Artie Murphy, an outfielder and expects to grab off several more classy performers before the curtain rings up. Gus realizes that home talent makes a great hit with the cash customers and he will have as many Medfordites in the lineup as possible.

Two Court Games Tonight

Two Greater Boston league basketball games are scheduled for this evening. The flashy Fern Marquette quintet journeys to Cambridge where they will meet the St. Mary's. Chelsea K. of C. entertains the league leading Pittsos from East Boston.

"Nig" Curtin, formerly of the Boston major club, is slated to hold down a forward assignment for the Ferns. Lou Gordon, Reecos Fitts Morrissey, Connell and Jenkins are the other stars in the South Boston lineup.

CANTON TO OPPOSE NATICK TOWN TEAM

Having won six consecutive games the Canton Town basketball quintet will oppose the Natick Town Team next Friday evening at Natick. Relying on short, accurate passes the Canton hoopsters are certainly making a hit. Manager James Shannon stated that Natick should be their seventh victim after a close game.

DARTMOUTH BOXING CARNIVAL MARCH 8

Hanover, Feb. 23 (A.P.).—The seventh annual Dartmouth boxing carnival conducted by Coach Eddie Shevlin and his pupils for the benefit of the Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital at Hanover will be held on March 8. There will be bouts in six classes ranging from featherweight to heavyweight.

DON'T I know? Didn't I cross the burning sands in search of pipe-contentment? And then you loomed up, like an oasis in the Desert of Doubt. Cool and refreshing, you were, Prince Albert. I'll never forget that first meeting.

Why, you just had everything I wanted in a pipe tobacco. You came zooming up the stem like a breeze through the date palms. You were fragrant as frankincense. You were friendly to my tongue and throat, refusing to mistreat them.

You're still sheik of the smoke-tribe, Prince Albert. I'm FOR you a hundred per cent. You and my trusty jimmy-pipe go with me everywhere, smoothing out the wrinkles in the roadway of life. The tongue you've been so kind to will always speak a good word in return.

Maybe there are some other chaps roaming the hot-pipe desert, at the mercy of the bedouins of bite and the pirates of parch. I hope they are listening in. I'm putting on all the power I've got to tell them what a lot of comfort is waiting for them in the tidy red tins marked "Prince Albert."

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

ARE THE ANTI-FEMINISTS WRONG?

Happiness Lies in Love, Marriage and Motherhood

By Beatrice Fairfax

She occupies a unique position in the writing world as an authority on problems of love

"FEMINIST," is a new word used to designate the follower of an ancient doctrine called feminism.

Under one name or another feminism, which means "advancing the interests of women," has existed since time immemorial.

Every broad-minded, public-spirited individual believes in furthering the interests of women, for improved womanhood means improved wifehood and motherhood.

But there are avowed feminists who go further than this.

"Unfettered personality and self-expression at all costs," is their slogan.

It is against this fanatical element in feminism that so-called anti-feminists warn us.

"The woman peril is about to overwhelm our homes," they assert. "The average man doesn't take his peril seriously—not yet.

Besides, doesn't feminist literature date straight back to the Bible? In the book of Proverbs we will find description of the best woman, whose price is "above rubies":

"She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands. She bringeth her food from afar. . . She considereth a field and buyeth it. With the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard. Strength her loins with strength and strengtheneth her arms. She perceiveth that her merchandise is profitable. . . She maketh herself coverings of tapestry . . . She maketh fine linen and selleth it and delivereth girdles unto the merchant. . . She stretcheth out her hand to the poor, yea, she reacheth forth her hand to the needy."

Could there be a more vivid description of a married woman engaged in business and industry, in real estate, agriculture and merchandise? No wonder her husband had plenty of leisure to associate among the elders and praise his wife. Yet home life survived in spite of all that time to this

"To what is this revolution due?

"To neglected homes, neglected husbands, neglected children. Between the wars of conflicting sexes and feminists

"To a marvellous extent women still do the work that love, and perfect self-expression and freedom imply enthusiastic feminism.

Some women are ready to sacrifice themselves completely for happiness and domestic life. And they are able to find great joy and usefulness in the professions, or to try to which they are best suited, for all these opportunities and advantages we have to thank feminism, which has done so much to emancipate and uplift women and so indirectly to uplift all of life for both men and women.

F RHEUMATIC BEGIN ON SALTS

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, Eat No Sweets.

. Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat no sweets of any kind for a while, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of Jad Salts occasionally to help keep down uric and toxic acids.

Rheumatism is caused by poison toxins, called acids, which are generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly old weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work. Then become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the poison, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful in neutralize acidity, remove body waste, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus helping to rid the blood of these rheumatic poisons.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism

NO MAN WORTH SUICIDE, FAY KING TELLS GIRLS

By Fay King

THE other day I heard of a beautiful young woman who had committed suicide because a man had refused to marry her. She had jumped from a hotel window and killed herself. Her death, in the shape, could speak several languages, and had many friends.

It is said she chose to die because of a love affair with a certain man who broke their engagement.

Poor foolish girl!

As if such a man were worth dying for! As if such a one could be rich, poor, famous, or unknown, is worth killing one's self over!

It is true many other women have reached the place where they have thought death might make the man they loved sorry and haunt him, but thank goodness they snapped out of it and lived to laugh at him!

Suicide doesn't bother the man who wants to get rid of you! It removes you forever from worrying him further, and instead of being sorry when he reads of what you have done, he is apt to be only a little sore and dispose of the unpleasant incident by denying that he ever knew you very well or even thought of marrying you!

The cleverer, richer and more prominent he is, the easier it is for him to hush the matter up and make you appear like a poor misguided fool who took his casual interest too seriously.

As for worrying what people will think because the friendship has ceased and that you cannot live to face the humiliation of their questioning, that's ridiculous! In the first place, if you are wise and do not take any one into your confidence, who is there to know how much you believed and he didn't mean?

If you have foolishly boasted of their friendship and then find it a little difficult to account for its sudden end, the best thing to do is take yourself on a little trip into new surroundings and among people who don't know you and about your affairs.

Mention it to no one and when you have forgotten it yourself, come back looking well and happy!

Everyone has his own troubles, but no one is sitting around living your life!

One rich man jilted a girl and suddenly married another girl. He gave the first girl something like twenty thousand dollars as a parting gift. Instead of taking that money and going away she boastingly lied to her friends and told them he had given her five times that much.

Result, she had to live in a style that would verify that!

The money was soon used up and then she, too, poor thing, killed herself!

A suicide of that sort gets very little sympathy and no revenge. Live—LIVE—and show them you can still laugh. You were happy before you met him and you'll be happy after you forget him!

The Making of a Husband, Interesting Serial on Married Life, by Ann Lisle

Haggard, disheveled and torn, my visitor was flung into the hall and stood facing me defiantly.

It was Jeanie.

"I got stuck," Jeanie said. "I couldn't get it out of the frozen rut. I blundered into"

"Did you walk? Did you have to desert the car?" I asked, seeing the condition of her clothes and the rimy and snow on her thin little pumps.

"I'll get you a hot drink," I said. "You can tell me about it later. There's boiling water. You shall have a cup of tea in a jiffy. And I dare say you'll be ready in an hour."

"I don't want any tea," exclaimed Jeanie. "I've had plenty."

"Perry!" I asked.

"Perry went at 2 to sit for his picture. The light was wonderful. The air was lovely and still dry leaves. And then its little whole clouds of white before you—like big waves, breaking over you. You can't see your way, and when you try to feel it, the wind won't let you go where you want. Oh, Anne, I'm so glad I'm here."

"Now, Jeanie, you're not drinking that tea. Anne? I'm here—safe," cried Jeanie in a broken voice, while tears streamed down her cheeks and she put her face in her hands.

"Where is Perry?" I asked.

"I was driving home. I—I—I have lost my way," said Jeanie. It so terrific it sweeps you just where it wants to take you—as if you were

We worked till long after 4. Then we had tea. I left just after the first flakes began to fall. There was a detour. I didn't like it, so I turned back, thinking I'd start over and go around to the State road even if it is out of the way. But I couldn't get back to the main line here. I must have kept taking wrong turnings after I got mixed up by the detour. I got deeper and deeper into little wood roads—logging roads, I think. It was cold and got darker and darker, and I was so afraid. I got out and began to run—and here I am."

"And quite safe," I said. "Perhaps you'd better take a hot bath. There's plenty of time before dinner."

"I guess I will," Jeanie agreed with unusual docility. "No need inquiring for Jim. He can't make it. If he gets to the village, he'll telephone. But no taxi will try to bring him through."

"You don't seem worried about your car," I said at a venture, and because I didn't want to tell Jeanie that Jim had planned to stay away from home even before the storm made his absence inevitable.

"I've handed me of my troubles," Jeanie said with a somewhat overstressed lightness. "If you're sure you don't need me to help with the dinner, I'll go take that bath you spoke of. I think it would be very comforting. I'm frozen to the marrow."

"Go ahead," I agreed.

But I wondered if Jeanie were as conscious that I was keeping something from her as I was that she had something she desired to conceal from me.

By the time Jeanie had finished her bath and had dressed herself in the warm underthings I had left out for her dinner was ready to serve. I had heaped a plate with food and had put it in a covered dish tucked away in the oven. I was cold and got darker and darker, and I was so afraid. I got out and began to run—and here I am."

"And quite safe," I said. "Perhaps you'd better take a hot bath. There's plenty of time before dinner."

But I wondered if Jeanie were as conscious that I was keeping something from her as I was that she had something she desired to conceal from me.

By the time Jeanie had finished her bath and had dressed herself in hot food and a welcome waiting for him. And as my last vestige of fear was conquered by Jeanie's companionship, I was planning to make up the bed in the maid's room with clean linen and offer Tarasov the hospitality I now felt he deserved.

GILDED KISSES By Beatrice Burton

A Live Serial of Love and Temptation Right Here In Boston

and on her lips was a small smile that barely lifted the dimpled corners of it.

John raised his hat and his car swept on down the wide street.

"Why, you're shaking all over like a bowl full of jelly!" Flossie, who was still holding Mary Rose's arm, exclaimed. She looked at her and saw that she had gone dead white.

"Mary Rose Middleton!" she said disgustedly. "You've still crazy about that chump, aren't you? You look as if somebody had knocked you silly."

Mary Overcomes

"I always will be," Mary Rose found herself saying. She hadn't meant to say it, but all her defences were down. The sudden sight of John Manners had, as Flossie put it, knocked her silly.

She was still trembling and her effort to smile reassuringly at her sister was not successful.

"My good kid," Flossie began, with that soft sweetness that expectant motherhood had given her, "I think you're foolish to let yourself go on caring like this for a man who doesn't give the snap of his finger for you—and never did!"

Mary Rose's nostrils narrowed with the quick, keen sigh that she gave.

"He did care for me—once upon a time," she answered. "There were weeks and weeks, while I worked for him, that we both were miserable because he was ensnared by Doris Hintz. He told me he loved me better than any one he'd ever seen.

Flossie laughed a little. "Men have been known to tell women things like that before — and not mean it! Men are brutes, Mary Rose. The only way to get along with some of them is never to believe anything they say!"

Mary Rose shook her head "No—I have to believe people when they say things to me," she said. "That is, if they're people I like. And I could have sworn that John Manners meant what he said to me. He just seemed to change overnight. What's the matter, Flossie?"

Flossie Repents

For Flossie was evidently upset over something. She was frowning, and suddenly she pulled away from Mary Rose and stopped dead in her tracks.

"I wonder—" she said vaguely, "I wonder if that had anything to do with it?"

"What? I don't get you," Mary Rose replied. "What had anything to do with me and John Manners

"Something that I just remembered—something horrid that I did a long time ago," Flossie faltered. "Look here, let's go into this place and sit down. I feel faint."

"You've walked too far, dear." And Mary Rose took her arm and led her to a little table for two in the sunny window of the tea shop they happened to be passing

"I'm going to tell you something —something that will make you hate me forever and ever," Flossie said to her, when Mary Rose had ordered

But when they had drunk the last drop of the chocolate and had eaten all of the cinamon toast her confession was still unmade.

She fidgeted in her chair for a few minutes—plaiting her napkin in little folds and opening and shutting the pierced silver top of her new handbag

Suddenly, without looking at Mary Rose, she began to tell her what it was so hard for her to say.

"Do you remember that time last Fall when you gave mother the money for a coat and she bought one for me instead? And you wouldn't let me keep it and called me the 'family pig'?" she asked.

Mary Rose barely nodded and she went on:

"Well, I was furious with you. Remember I wouldn't eat supper with you that night? And I made up my mind to get even with you for it—and I did!"

Flossie Confesses

Mary Rose started. She remembered, suddenly, that it was directly after the affair of the coat that John Manners had become so cold and formal and distant toward her —had withdrawn into his shell, so to speak.

"The next morning I hurried down to the office ahead of you," Flossie went on, speaking rapidly and smoothly now. "And I told John Manners that you had told me he was crazy about you—"

"But I never had told you anything of the kind!" Mary broke in, shaking her head

"Now, just let me finish my story," Flossie begged. "I know you hadn't told me that, but I had seen you letting him make love to you that night, down by the lumber pile at the corner. Remember?"

Remember? Mary Rose knew that she would never forget that cold, windy, star-studded night of enchantment when John Manners had told her he loved her!

She knew only too well that she would remember that night long, long after she had forgotten everything else that had ever happened to her.

"Yes, I remember perfectly," she answered dully. "Go on. What else did you say to him?"

"I told him that you were just stringing him along—pretending to save a crush on him for the fun of the thing." Flossie finished her shameful little tale. "I told him that you really were crazy about Tom Fitzroy and that you expected to marry him, 'most any times"

She stopped and there was a long silence.

Mary Forgives

Flossie began to wish that Mary Rose would look up and say something. Scold her, revile her, get up and walk away—anything. But she sat perfectly still with her hands clasped on the table in front of her.

Flossie Middleton's waking heart began to ache a little at the sight of the mended gloves covering the hands. She remembered how seldom Mary Rose had ever had new things—how she had just spent almost all of her salary, always, to keep the little brown house going! While she herself had squandered what money she had on choker beads and new hats and crepe de chine step-ins that she couldn't afford

She covered her face with her little hands "Mary Rose," she said in a muffled voice, "I'd never have done it—unless I hadn't hated John Manners, too' I did hate him' I used to try to make him notice me, the way the rest of the fellows at the office did, and I never could make him look at me! He was wild about you and I knew it—I could see it!" She began to cry.

And then Mary Rose reached out across the table and patted her arm gently. "Don't cry, honey," she said softly. "You mustn't at a time like this, you know. You must be happy for the next few months you know, until the baby gets here! And don't even think about John Manners any more! If he'd really cared about me, he wouldn't have believed what you said about me, would he?"

"I don't know," Flossie sniffed, wiping the end of her little pink, swollen nose with a small handkerchief that was fragrant with the smell of jasmine perfume. "I don't know Men are so funny"

When she left her at the door of the honeymoon flat, Mary Rose walked slowly home.

It was dusk, and a new moon rode high in the violet sky, like a silver sail boat.

The fresh odor of opening buds and new, sprouting grass was in the cool, electric air. And her memory carried her back to a year ago, when she had walked home on just such a night as this—thinking about John Manners, just as she was thinking about him now. Loving him as hopelessly as she still loved him!

It had been Spring then

It was Spring now.

But Mary Rose was sure that in her heart it would always be December.

Mary Rose meets John Manners in tomorrow's installment, but cannot tell her secret.

"A PIRATE OF HEARTS," beginning in the American next Wednesday, introduces the super-flapper, Beatrice Burton in this new serial of hers outdoes the thrill of "GILDED KISSES"—the most successful newspaper serial in years. Smoking, drinking and necking are merely casual in this super-flapper—but wait until tomorrow and begin this story. It's the best ever.

After the Boyish Bob, What? Every Girl's Guessing

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

YOU think you can never give it up—of course, just as your mamma swore she would never give up her huge plaid-silk sleeves stiffened with crinoline—but she did, and so will you give up the boyish bob.

You may wear short hair. Girls and mammas, and grandmammas, all have found such uncanny delight in this short hair that we may never go back to the long mane that Rapunzel let down the castle wall for her Prince to climb up by; we may wear it short for ten, twenty years, but it will not be in this same fashion.

For the boy cut is the end of the road, the top swing of the pendulum, and everybody knows that the pendulum always swings back, and that a road always doubles back and starts off to some other adventure; and that no girl stays faithful to the same fashion forever, no matter how mad she is about it!

So—WHAT is it going to be? That's what's haunting the sleek heads asleep or awake. What is going to be the smart and ravishing thing to do with locks that will be longer? Never will they go back to any outline that went before. Whatever it is, it will be something you have not seen before.

Will we tie it in a knob on top? Turn it under up the back like little Irene Bordoni, bringing in lovely combs? Curl it and pin it flat all over? Wear a WIG? Fit a cap of gold and silver net, set with jewels, tight over it to keep the awkward ends close? Wear a bandeau?

Will we wear it as they did when there were bustles and basques—banged and combed down back the ears—for some actresses are doing that now.

Or will we—heavens!—could it be that we will swing right back and wear heaps of hair—FALSE HAIR?

It's a sober thought, boys—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Right Breakfast for Workers

Eat Food that Supplies "Balanced" Ration After Night's Fast

IF YOU feel tired, hungry, "dopey" hours before lunch, don't jump to the conclusion it's poor health. Thousands have unenergetic mornings because they start days with breakfasts lacking in certain food elements.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 68% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

Dainty Feet Important Factor, Says Jeritza

By Maria Jeritza
Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

PROPER care of the feet may not be a romantic subject, but it's an extremely important factor of beauty.

Badly groomed feet or badly fitted shoes can change a wonderfully good time to almost unbearable torture. They can bring fine wrinkles about the eyes and a scowl to the forehead.

Properly fitted stockings are important allies to health, beauty and comfort. Stockings that are too short will cramp your feet and may cause bunions. Too long stockings are just as objectionable because they wrinkle about the toes and heels. Have your feet measured when next you purchase shoes, then buy all your shoes and stockings to fit your size.

Do you realize that there are more sweat glands to the square inch on the soles of your feet than on any other part of your body? Since bodily elimination is essential to good health and a clear skin, you can see for yourself how necessary it is to keep the skin of your feet soft and the pores open. Active circulation of blood through the feet is also essential to health and beauty.

To keep the feet at their best, daily bathing, daily exercise and massage are advisable, although the massage may be dispensed with if circulation be perfect.

The feet should be washed every day in warm soapsuds, rinsed, then dried carefully. Make sure that the skin is dry between your toes, otherwise it may crack. Dust scented talcum powder or boric acid between your toes.

Clip your toe-nails straight across the top, then file them until they are smooth.

Press the cuticle back from the base of your toe-nails just as you do in manicuring your fingernails.

Have you a tendency to callouses? If so massage your feet with the following foot cream:

White vaseline .... 4 ounces
Eucalyptus oil .... 1 teaspoonful
Oil of wintergreen, 1 teaspoonful

After this massage rub a piece of pumice stone over each callous until the hard part is rubbed away. Finally, massage the skin under each toe and the muscles of your instep.

You will find it infinitely refreshing and restful to tired feet to bathe them, dust them with talcum, massage them with foot cream and exercise them as I have suggested. You will be rewarded by the rosy hue of the skin of your feet, due to improved circulation, and by the foot comfort you achieve, which, in turn, will be reflected in the rested, animated expression of your face.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

NOT in the setting decreed for our travel, pleasing or dull though it seem to our eye, not in the web of the skein we unravel, not in our task does our victory lie. Not in the shouts with which men may acclaim us, not in the fame we may wear like a crown, not in the praises they speak when they name us, victory goes not with worldly renown. Only within lies the cause that can make us futile and foolish or sure of success; only within lie the forces that take us onward untouched by life's tumult and stress.

The German Savings Banks and Clearing Association is an organization for facilitating municipal banking and assisting in the development of credit and savings institutions of municipalities and other governmental sub-divisions of Germany. The Central Association comprises fifteen district associations which have as members over three thousand cities, towns and municipal districts located throughout the country, including thirty-eight of the forty-two cities in Germany having a population of 100,000 or more. It is estimated that the total membership embraces a population of over 56,000,000, or approximately 90 per cent. of the entire population of Germany.

Coupon Bonds $1,000 denomination, registerable as to principal only. Reichskredit Gesellschaft Aktiengesellschaft, Berlin, Germany, Trustee, and Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, Illinois, Co-Trustee.

Information regarding the Association, these Bonds, and the security therefor is given in a letter, signed by Messrs. Kleiner and Jurach, President and Vice-President respectively, of the German Savings Banks and Clearing Association, copies of which will be furnished on request. This information is summarized in part as follows:

The Consolidated Loan: In the economic reconstruction of Germany the Government has consistently enforced its policy of restricting expenditures by the various states and municipalities to the most urgently needed improvements. Issuance of loans, payable in foreign moneys, is confined with few exceptions to obtaining funds for the construction of or additions to income-producing public works. In addition to the comparatively few German states and cities which have been permitted to contract external obligations, there are many others which need funds for capital expenditures of this nature, but in amounts too small to justify separate issues. Therefore, the Council for Foreign Loans of the Ministry of Finance of the German Government has authorized the German Savings Banks and Clearing Association to do the present financing and to be reimbursed by taking the bonds, payable in dollars, of the communities benefited.

The Association: The Germans Saving Banks and Clearing Association, through its district associations, comprises over 3,000 cities, towns and municipal districts including country districts. The Association thus embraces a population estimated at over 56,000,000, or approximately 90% of the total population of Germany.

Security: These Bonds, in the opinion of counsel, will be the direct obligations of the German Savings Banks and Clearing Association. The municipalities which are members of the District Associations are liable with their entire property and taxing power for the obligations of the District Association to which they belong and the District Associations in turn are liable for the obligations of the Central Association. In this manner, these Bonds are in ultimate effect the joint and several obligations of over 3,000 cities, towns and municipal districts which comprise the membership of the District Associations. The member municipalities in practically all cases, own their own gas, water, electrical and other public works.

In addition, the Bonds of Series of 1926 due 1947 are to be specifically secured by pledge with the Trustee of an equal principal amount of bonds of approximately 130 municipalities located throughout Germany which are members of the District Associations. The pledged bonds are to be deposited, from time to time, as the proceeds of this loan are distributed and will correspond in interest rate, sinking fund and maturity to the Bonds of this issue. Interest and sinking fund on the pledged bonds will be payable in dollars and will provide the funds necessary to satisfy the interest and sinking fund requirements of the Bonds of this issue.

Purpose of Issue: According to Government authorization the proceeds of this loan must be used only for the construction or improvement of gas and electric properties, water works and other revenue producing public works. Furthermore, it must be established that there is a public need for the work contemplated and that the income of the properties will be sufficient to provide the interest and amortization requirements of the loan.

Sinking Fund: The Trust Agreement will provide for progressively increasing annual sinking fund payments commencing November 15, 1927, calculated to retire all bonds of this issue by maturity.

Information contained herein has, in large part, been transmitted by cable and the contents of this advertisement are subject to cable errors.

We recommend these bonds for investment

Price 94¾ and interest, Yielding 7½%

Bonds are offered for delivery when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of our counsel. It is expected that interim receipts of Harris Trust and Savings Bank will be available for delivery on or about March 22, 1926.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

New men, new ideas. Clarence Dillon is to introduce into the running of Dodge Brothers an idea which can be, and doubtless will be, profitably followed by many corporations.

Let me tell how it all came about:

* * *

Mr. Dillon very recently attended a large gathering of Dodge dealers at Detroit. He was impressed by their calibre. He was impressed also by the importance of the part played by them in maintaining the success of the enterprise.

The thought occurred to him: Why should this large body of capable men, who are responsible for distributing the Dodge output, not be directly represented on the board of directors?

When Mr. Dillon is sure he is right, he doesn't dilly-dally before going ahead.

* * *

So he rose and made a very frank talk. Before he entered that meeting he felt sure, he said, that with E. G. Wilmer and President Haynes, together with Ray, Joe and Robert Graham, Dodge had the best group of men it was possible to assemble, a perfect machine. But since the meeting and mingling with and listening to many of the company's 3,000 direct dealers, he had become convinced that one more thing should be done to round out the organization completely.

Dealers, declared Mr. Dillon, must be represented from their own ranks on the board of directors.

He announced that he would urge the board of directors to elect two dealers as directors, with the idea of rotating them, so that, from year to year, dealers in all parts of the country will have direct representation.

* * *

I understand that at the next meeting of the board of directors of Dodge Brothers, to be held soon, two dealers will be named directors.

EQUITABLE LIFE GAINS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

The sixty-ninth annual statement of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, published today, shows gains in all important items. The assets on December 31 last totalled $792,405,000, an increase of $86,793,000 over 1924, which is the largest gain ever made by the company. The outstanding insurance passed the four billion mark a few months ago, and now totals nearly $4,400,600,000.

The new insurance paid for during the past year aggregated $825,600,000, including $67,000,000 of group insurance. This was the largest amount of new business in any year in the history of the company and represents an increase of $158,000,000 over the amount paid for in 1924.

A further improvement in the company's mortality experience is indicated by the decrease from 84.08 per cent. in 1924 to 82.14 per cent. in 1925 in the ratio of actual to expected losses.

Sterling Is Off

Sterling (cables) sold at 4.86⅝, off 1-32; francs, 3.60¼ cents, up .05¼ cent.

NEARLY $600,000,000 was spent in 1925 in drilling the 25,623 oil wells completed, compared with $474,328,329 for 21,894 wells in 1924, and $315,704,000 for 24,428 wells in 1923.

EDISON TO PUT STOCK MARKET "ON THE AIR"

Through Station WEEI of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, the Boston News Bureau, beginning today, will broadcast the important events of the day in the stock market and business world. The broadcast will be made every business day, except Saturdays, at 3:45 p. m., and will consist of a five-minute review of the important financial and business news of the day.

It is felt that the addition to the program of Station WEEI will be appreciated by a great many radio listeners as the Boston News Bureau, through its network of private wires and corps of trained correspondents, is in daily touch with the financial centres of this country and the world.

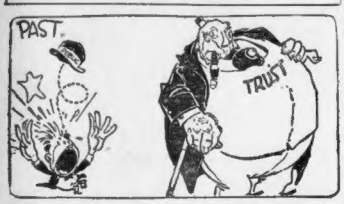
Senator Capper's Two Cartoons

The "Trust" and the "Merger." There IS a Difference



This is how the public used to act, when you talked about a Trust. "Gimme his blood," the public cried.

Senator Capper, who represents Kansas in the Senate and controls various important newspapers, uses these two cartoons to answer Shakespeare's question, "What's in a name?"

The first picture shows how the public feels when a large fat person is called "trust." The second picture shows how gentle and pleased the same public is when the fat gentleman scratches out "trust" and writes "merger" instead.

Not long ago, the trust was the horror of the hour. Bryan suggested that no trust should control more than HALF of any business. It was a brilliant suggestion, only with two trusts each owning half, the owners might get together and make it about the same as though one trust owned ALL.

Men ran for office and were elected upon their solemn promise to "bust the trusts." After they got into office, sometimes, the wicked trusts took good care of them, made them happy and financially well off. And the trust busting was postponed.

The Mollified Public Says "Atta Boy."

It is not just to say and Senator Capper does not say, that there is no difference between a trust and a merger.

The original trust, out for blood, fighting everything, working by rebates, boycotts, secret deals, was, in its class, like the wild African buffalo of the swamps in the bovine class. The wild African buffalo is fierce, and runs you through with his horns.

The "MERGER," now replacing the "TRUST," is a gentler creature. It is in the world of big business what the gentle domestic cow or meek ox is in the bovine tribe.

A merger is a combination of various big businesses made into a still BIGGER business. It is supposed to be, and OUGHT to be, regulated and closely watched by the public and the Government.

Business must be big, if it is to compete in the world today.

In Europe they not only organize business on a great corporation scale, but on a NATIONAL and even INTERNATIONAL SCALE.

One single British trust controls the rubber output of the world, and incidentally makes the United States pay hundreds of millions a year for rubber that costs three times per pound what it did a little while ago.

Germany and France between them are combining in a great world steel trust. We must allow OUR business men to organize on the biggest scale possible, if we mean to compete in the world's markets and keep our workmen busy at high wages.

Whether or not the Government of the United States is ABLE enough and HONEST enough to control these big business units remains to be seen. However, if we haven't enough honesty and ability to watch and control BIG concerns, we wouldn't have enough honesty OR ability to control a lot of LITTLE concerns, with their managers making deals behind closed doors.

"Hiring and Firing"

General Electric Makes a Discovery

Discovering three years ago that in a twelvemonth the organization had hired and fired 7,000 persons, and that the cost of this turnover was more than $500,000, executives of the General Electric Company called upon the industrial service department to find and apply a remedy.

Last year, as a result, the cost of new employes to the "G. E." was reduced by more than $200,000.

Under the service department comes the employment branch, which has made an analysis of every job in the organization and endeavors to find the right job for the right man. Great care is taken, nowadays, for example, that no nervous man shall be assigned to a task which requires infinite care or great patience.

The BEST workman, Louis A. Kirkman of General Electric's service department says, is the healthy, happy and CONTENTED workman.

The River Works of the General Electric Company, in Lynn, is a city within itself, a city with a population of TEN THOUSAND. It has its own street department, hospital, ambulance, doctors, railroad, restaurant, all the things which the grouping together of so many people make necessary.

By studying business conditions in advance, and planning the year's work so that men may be transferred from one department to another, the company hopes to do away altogether with seasonal employment, high peaks and low depressions, "hiring and firing."

SEEING STARS FROM SHAFT IN DAYTIME

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

ONE of the most fascinating of the many traditions pertaining to the stars is that concerning their occasional visibility in full daylight, especially to observers situated at the bottom of a deep well, or a mine shaft, or a tall chimney.

Contradictory statements have often been made concerning the possibility of this phenomenon. Not long ago a professor—I do not recall his name—demonstrated, at least to his own satisfaction, that it could not be so.

However things are sometimes SO in spite of the most beautiful demonstrations. More than two thousand years ago Aristotle wrote:

From a Shaft.

"Keenness of sight is as much the power of seeing far as of accurately distinguishing the differences presented by the objects viewed. These two properties are not met with in the same individuals. For he who holds his hand over his eyes, or looks through a tube, is not, on that account, more or less able to distinguish differences of color, although he will see objects at a greater distance. Hence it arises that persons in caverns or cisterns are occasionally enabled to see stars."

Sir John Herschel in his "Outlines of Astronomy" says: "From the bottoms of deep narrow pits, such as a well or the shaft of a mine, such bright stars as pass the zenith may even be discerned by the naked eye; and we ourselves have heard it stated by a celebrated optician that the earliest circumstances which drew his attention to astronomy was the regular appearance, at a certain hour for several successive days, of a considerable star through the shaft of a chimney.

On the contrary Alexander von Humboldt, commenting on Aristotle's statement, and on a similar statement made by Pliny, who named some of the stars that had been seen in this way, says in his "Cosmos":

"While practically engaged in mining operations I was in the habit during many years of passing in mines where I could see the sky through deep mine shafts, yet I was never able to observe a star; nor did I ever meet with any individual in the Mexican, Peruvian or Siberian mines who had heard of stars having been seen by daylight; although in the many latitudes in both hemispheres in which I have visited deep mines a sufficiently large number of stars have passed the zenith to have afforded a favorable opportunity for their being seen."

To this Humboldt adds the very reasonable qualification: "Phenomena whose manifestation depends on the accidental concurrence of favoring circumstances ought not to be disbelieved on account of their rarity."

Associated with the alleged visibility of stars from deep excavations, is the certain fact that stars are visible with telescopes in full daylight, and that occasionally such bright objects as Venus can be seen with the naked eye even at noonday.

Now the reason for the general invisibility of such objects by day is that the illumination of the sky by sunlight is so strong that it overcomes the relatively faint light of the stars. As evening comes on, and the atmospheric illumination sinks into twilight, the relative brightness of the stars increases, until they begin to prick, like electric needles, through the fading curtain of day.

This is one of the most charming phenomena of that mystic hour during which the sun slowly withdraws the last reflection of his beams from the upper sky, and night, with her sparkling myriads, takes possession of the firmament.

In looking up at the small portion of sky visible from a deep shaft or a chimney or well, the eye is shaded from much of the diffused light of the sky, and the brightness of a star that happens to lie in the line of sight may be so increased relatively, that it becomes visible just as it would at twilight.

Could Not See Them

While writing I have accidentally come upon this statement by Mr. Howard T. Martin of Marion County, Indiana, quoted in "Popular Astronomy."

"Many of our farmers in Marion County have the habit of descending to the bottom of their seventy-foot silos in the daytime and looking at the stars. This is quite common in early September when the silos are empty, and I myself have plainly seen Ursa Major, Algol and Capella in the early afternoon of a September day."

While congratulating the Marion County farmers on their devotion to the stars, I would simply remark that while Ursa Major is not very far from their zenith in the early afternoons of September, Algol and Capella are low in the northwest, so that they would have to tip their silos into almost a horizontal position to see them.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

IT was a little letter, but I imagine a fairly large-sized tragedy lay behind it.

"What can a wife do to save the situation," it ran, "in a marriage where the wife herself has grown up but the husband has failed to do so?

And she signed herself "Beasie." So I suppose it's Beasie who is the grown-up wife with the little boy-husband. Can't you almost see them, World! Dignified, efficient, composed Beasie with her hunger for orderly, ambitious living—and the Boisterous Billy, whose name she bears—the Big Kid, probably bald-headed, with the noisy ha-ha and the stale line of jokes—the Big Kid who wants to turn Beasie's "refined evenings" into Rough House Riots—who flirts with all the girls and nudges all the boys under the ribs and aims to be The Life of Every Party.

I'm not going to bawl out Boisterous Billy. Rather, I'm going to tell Grown-Up Beasie that the first thing the Grown-Up mate should do in a situation like this is to—

Sit down and envy the one who isn't grown up!

I mean it!

Yes, I know how "silly they are" and how embarrassing it is to "see them cutting up as if they were fifteen, when everyone know they're fifty" and how "exasperating" it is to have husband (or a wife) who insists on skipping and chuckling through the grim business of life.

But those same skippers and chucklers get something out of life and put something into it that the Mature Minds never glimpse. They're a blessed leaven to the stodgy mass of Adult Respectability. They're the Peter Pans who have "never lost their baby teeth and have never learned the meaning of tears."

We need Peter Pans. We need them to keep us from taking ourselves too seriously. We need them to turn our primness and priggishness and posing into a giggling jest. We need them like we need puppies and circuses and slap stick comedy and confetti. And it is the wise wife who can savor the precious quality that lies within her Big Kid Husband. And a most foolish wife who resents the capers and flirtations of her overgrown infant and tries to crush his spirit.

MEDBURY SAYS

By John P. Medbury

STATISTICS show that there are thousands of men in the United States who can't either read or write. We used to pity them, but nowadays, with so many breach of promise suits in court, we envy them.

ILLITERACY has come to be an accomplishment.

THERE'S a lot of truth in that old saying, "What a man doesn't know, won't hurt him."

IGNORANCE saves him a lot of money.

BEFORE a man can learn to write well he has spent four years in college. And then he spends the next four years in jail.

IT'S all right to know your A B C's, but you've got to be careful how you routine them.

AFTER you write a love letter you should read it out loud to yourself so that you can hear how it's going to sound in court.

IF you have to get slushy with a girl, it's better to correspond by telephone.

IT costs three cents more, but it's worth it.

EVERY nickel you put in the phone is an insurance policy.

IF she sues you, you can tell the judge that you got the wrong number.

YOU'LL not only win, but you'll get your nickel back.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "INSECURITY"

A MAN who is loved
By two WOMEN,
And is giving
SOME of his love
To EACH is
In a DANGEROUS position.
It is like THREE
People sitting in a
Row on TWO chairs.
Sooner or later
ONE of the women
Will FALL OFF the
End, or the man
Will fall in
The middle.
But that SOMEBODY
Will come a cropper
IS CERTAIN.
Every woman MAY be
Double-faced, but every Man has TWO SHOULDERS,
And the WIFE on his right
Hand can NEVER be SURE what is going on,
On the left. And the Woman who MAYBE
Possesses his heart never KNOWS what goes on
IN HIS HOME.
The man who IS LOVING
TWO women
BETRAYS both.

THE CRITICISM OF RABBI WISE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MANY of the Jews are criticizing Rabbi Wise because he recently referred to Jesus as a great moral leader and a good and wise man.

They viewed in this act a gesture of disloyalty, as though a member of one party had been dallying with the enemy.

It shows that in most of us religion is a war cry rather than a reasonable conclusion.

There is no doubt that Jesus was a good man and that His doctrines are on the whole the wisest that the human race has yet received.

Whether the body of Christian people have fully exemplified these teachings or not is another question.

Christians themselves are often the first to admit that they are far from keeping the principles of their Founder.

Instead of being an act of disloyalty we should look upon the statement of Rabbi Wise as being one of friendliness. The more religious people get away from the idea that their religion is a matter of partisanship and approach the idea that it is searching for the truth and a willingness to be guided by the truth wherever it appears, the more one denomination is friendly to another.

That we are Christians is no sign that we can see nothing good in Buddha or Mohammed. That we are Jews is no reason to suppose that there is no good in any other branch of faith.

Truth is a precious stone that has many facets. In the final outcome it will be found that every form of faith has some good in it.

The wise and hospitable mind will be eager to recognize whatever of good there may be in those who differ from it.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

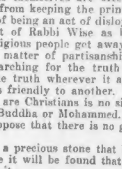
MY Daughter, the ways of a foolish husband are the delight of the newspapers, but the light of a Good Husband is hidden under a bushel of suspicion.

Now, there came unto me a Married Man of Babylon, who wept, saying: "Alas, what shall I do that I may have honor among men, and glory in the eyes of mine own wife?

"For, lo, I am not a stepper, but a steady-going man and possess neither a wandering foot nor a roving fancy, nor eyes for any woman save my wife.

"Yet, what doth my rectitude profit me? For, when I tell my Beloved the truth, she greeteth my word with scorn and suspicion, and will not believe; and in her books I am written down 'Smooth Liar.'

"Behold, when I am detained at a conference or a lodge meeting, she greeteth me with bitter laughter and accusations. Yet, when I prove mine innocence, she is filled with disappointment, because the 'conference' was not a blonde, nor the lodge meeting a red haired manicurist!



Helen Rowland

"Likewise, amongst my high-stepping friends and the men of mine office, I am known as 'mollycoddle' and 'old Debbie'; and amongst my wife's friends as 'dissembler' and 'hypocrite.' Yea, Janus, the two-faced was not more suspected than I!

"Yet, I do not yearn for flirtation, and my dancing-days are over; man-hunters do not tempt me, and fingers only bore me. I sign not after wine-cellars, and golf is mine only vacation. For, Business is my Deity and my middle name is 'Honest James'!"

And, lo, I advised him, saying: "Go to, my Son. Knowest thou not, that a woman's craving for excitement must be satisfied? Yea, she must have something to lie awake and worry about, at night!

"Lo, a foolish husband greeteth his wife's accusations with protests of virtue and good alibis; and a good husband is filled with pain and indignation at her suspicions.

"But a wise husband saith, 'Ishat Bol' and permitteth her to think him guilty. And, behold, her imagination doeth the rest, and she is satisfied!

"For, verily, verily, no woman can be happy, unless she hath something to make her miserable, something to 'worry about,' somebody to 'reform,' something to be 'curious' about, and something to suffer over.

"And the way of a Good Husband is exceeding ticklish!

SELAH.
